LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

Baltimore, December 1, 1943

To the Maryland Historical Society

GENTLEMEN:

The Committee on Publications of the Maryland Historical Society presents as Volume LX of the Archives of Maryland the Proceedings of the Charles County Court 1666-1674. This is the ninth volume of the Court Series of the Archives. This volume is a direct continuation of the proceedings of this same county court, covering the years 1658-1666, which appeared in 1936 as Volume LIII of the Archives.

It has been the plan of the Committee on Publications to publish in the Court Series, as a cross-section of the legal procedure of Maryland for the third quarter of the seventeenth century, the proceedings of the several courts of the Province. Those published embrace the Provincial (or General Court), the Court of Chancery, four county courts, and a manorial court. Until the year 1694 when an independent Court of Appeals was established, the highest appellate court in the Province was the Upper House of the General Assembly, sitting as a Court of Appeals. These Assembly proceedings have already been published. The proceedings of the Provincial Court from the establishment of the Province through the year 1670 have likewise appeared as volumes IV, X, XLI, XLIX, and LVII of the Archives. In these Provincial Court volumes down through the year 1668 will also be found entered the equity cases heard by these same justices when they sat as a court of chancery, but beginning with the year 1669 a separate series of chancery record books begins. One chancery volume, covering the years 1669-1679, designated "Proceedings of the Court of Chancery", has already appeared as Volume LI of the Archives.

Two volumes of county court proceedings for the third quarter of the seventeenth century have been previously published. Only the court proceedings for the counties of Kent, Charles, Talbot, and Somerset for this period have been preserved; those for the other counties have been lost. The records of Kent (1648-1676), Talbot (1662-1664), Somerset (1665-1668), and Charles (1658-1666) have been printed in volumes LIII and LIV. The records, which are fragmentary, of the manor court of St. Clement's Manor (1659-1672) have also been printed in Volume LIII. The volume which is now presented carries down the Charles County proceedings through the year 1674. Of the extant county court proceedings before the year 1675 there only remains for publication the proceedings of the Somerset County court from 1668 to 1674.

During the period covered by this volume Cecilius, Lord Baltimore, was the Lord Proprietary, and his son Charles, who later succeeded to the title, represented his father in Maryland as Lieutenant Governor. Political affairs at this time were quiescent in both England and Maryland. Indian disturbances in the Province were infrequent and not serious, although in 1666 there had been a slight outbreak at Piscataway. The population of the Province was increasing rapidly, due in considerable part to the influx of settlers from England and Virginia. It was in 1673 that Augustine Herrman, after exhaustive surveys, published his notable engraved map of Maryland and Virginia, receiving from Cecilius Calvert as a reward the grant of Bohemia Manor and other lands in Cecil County at the head of the Chesapeake, a princely estate of some twenty thousand acres. Trade showed marked improvement. Planters were building better houses. The Province of Maryland was getting into its stride.

In the preceding volume of the Proceedings of the Charles County Court (LIII), will be found a detailed account of its establishment in 1658, the same year the county was erected, and of its activities down to the year 1666, when the present volume continues the record. In the Introduction to the first volume of Charles County records will also be found a sketch of the organization, development, jurisdiction, and procedure of the Maryland county court system in general in the seventeenth century.

The Charles County Court which met either at, or near, the town of Portobacco, was composed of the prominent planters of the community, and exercised both judicial and administrative functions. There was in the 1666-1674 period an increase in the number of the justices on the bench from seven to eleven. All the justices were appointed by the Governor, through whom the Lord Proprietary thus exercised indirect but complete control. Power was centered in the three or four justices who headed the list, who were designated as "of the quorum"; and unless one or more of these, or a member of the Governor's Council, was present, the court could not lawfully function. The religious affiliation of the justices at this period is of some interest. Three of the quorum were, as was the Lord Proprietary, Roman Catholics. All the remaining justices, with one exception, seem to have been Protestants. The presiding justice during this entire nine year period, except for the one year when he was sheriff and therefore could not sit on the bench, was Henry Adams, who was also a Catholic. In only a single instance is the dissent of a justice to the judgment of the court recorded. This was when William Marshall refused to concur with the rest of the court in their refusal to grant an appeal to the Provincial Court. The great majority of the civil suits were tried before the court, although trial by a jury was granted in a number of instances. There were very few appeals to the Provincial Court asked, and none of those granted seem to have actually come up for a hearing. It was not until the close of 1674 that the Charles County Court had its own court house; before this it held its sessions at inns, or possibly in some instances in private houses.

During the nine year period covered by the present volume the records of the Charles County Court show the ill effects of the frequent changes in the clerkship. Four court clerks held office during this period, two of whom, Boughton and Bonner, seemed to have lost office through financial irregularities, and a third, Gibbon, died not long after taking office. It would appear that these three clerks, when they were appointed, were recent arrivals from England, and had doubtless come to Maryland with Proprietary promises of civil preferment. The court record for this period, defective and fragmentary as it often is, indicates that the newly arrived holders of the clerkship had considerable acquaintance with legal forms. Missing in this period are the picturesque and oftentimes coarse and sordid descriptive details of criminal and civil cases as recorded by earlier clerks, neighborhood men, who were less versed in technical legal phrase but more familiar with the personalities and local backgrounds of neighborhood squabbles and feuds. Although these newly imported clerks were apparently better legal technicians than their local predecessors they have left behind them a record which contains for us much less of human interest. One of them, Boughton, appears to have studied law in Gray's Inn, London. There is also conclusive evidence that these newcomers often failed, either intentionally or from indifference, to make entries in the court records in many instances, especially in criminal cases, which should have been recorded. Probably this was because their reward in fees, at so much an engrossed line, was less for these entries than it was in the case of civil actions where the losing litigant was obliged to pay for the entries in the court record as part of the "costs" charged against him.

The character of the various matters which came before the court and are entered in the court record is discussed in detail under various headings in the Introduction which follows. The record gives us a picture of seventeenth century life in a Maryland community having a population of something like two thousand souls, and, it may be added, in a community having a strongly litigious urge.

The Committee on Publications takes this occasion to call attention to the irreparable loss which the study of American colonial law, and more especially early Maryland law, has suffered in the recent death of Judge Carroll T. Bond, late chief judge of the Maryland Court of Appeals. His two books, The Court of Appeals of Maryland, and Proceedings of the Maryland Court of Appeals, 1695-1729, together with his other writings and addresses on colonial law, gave him an unrivaled position in this field. During the past twelve years five volumes of the Archives of Maryland have been published in its Court Series—the Proceedings of the Provincial Court, the Proceedings of the Court of Chancery, and the proceedings of four county courts—and in the editing of all of these volumes the Committee on Publications had the constant and untiring counsel and assistance of Judge Bond. For this invaluable help it is deeply grateful.

The next volume of the Archives of Maryland, which is now in press, will be the Proceedings of the General Assembly of Maryland, 1766-1768.

Respectfully submitted,

KENT ROBERTS GREENFIELD,

J. HALL PLEASANTS (editor),

RAPHAEL SEMMES,

Committee on Publications.

INTRODUCTION

This record of the proceedings of the Charles County Court for the 1666-1674 period is a direct continuation of the previously published proceedings of the court for the first nine years following the county's establishment in 1658. The latter, covering the 1658-1666 period, have been printed in Volume LIII of the Archives. In the introduction to that volume will be found a history of the early Maryland county court system, its origin, development, jurisdiction and procedure, and also of the relation of the county courts to the superior courts of the Province, viz.: the Upper House sitting as the court of appeals, the Provincial or General Court, and the Court of Chancery, as well as of the relation of county courts to the inferior manorial courts (Arch. Md. LIII, xi-lx). In that volume will also be found a sketch of the beginnings of the Charles County court and some mention of those who served as its early justices or commissioners (ibid., lxvi-lxvii). There also will be found a brief history of the manorial courts of the Province (ibid., lxi-lxv).

The Charles County material printed in Volume LIII was taken verbatim and literatim from libers A and B of the original court records, occupying in all 788 manuscript folio pages of these two original record books. The material in the present volume, some 748 manuscript pages of the original record books at La Plata, the county seat, is to be found in libers C, D, E, and part of F. Volume LIII ends with the minutes of the court session which opened on March 13, 1665/6. The present volume opens with a heading bearing this same date, which is followed immediately by entries of a number of Charles County deeds and warrants enrolled before the next meeting of the court, held in June, 1666.

THE COURT

The court met on June 12, 1666, with six justices present, James Lindsay, Zachary Wade (Waed), Francis Pope, Joseph Harrison, William Marshall, and Thomas Mathews. The only member of the court, as it was then constituted, not present, was Walter Beane (p. 11). An Ordinance of Governor Charles Calvert and the Council is the first entry in the court minutes proper. This is dated at St. John's, St. Mary's County, May 20, 1666. The Ordinance decrees that no changes which may have been made by the Governor by the renewal of the commissions of any of the justices should affect the validity of any suits or processes then pending before the courts, or affect the continuance of suits (pp. 11-12). The Ordinance is followed by the Governor's formal proclamation of it to the several county courts and sheriffs (pp. 12-13).

The court usually met six or seven times a year. Sessions were ordinarily, but not invariably, held in January, March, June, August, September, and November, but there was occasionally an October meeting. Fifty-five are recorded as having been held in this nine year period. It was at the June court that matters relating to orphans were ordinarily brought up. Although a new commission for justices was issued by the Governor on December 23, 1667, the same men were reappointed, with the exception of William Marshall and Walter Beane, with the names of Gerard Fowke and Humphrey Warren added, and Richard Boughton appointed clerk (Arch. Md. V, 21). Beane was apparently in bad health (pp. 106, 113), and died in 1672. Colonel Gerard Fowke, when requested at the August, 1668, court to take his seat, declined to do so with "an excuse for his not sitting that he was noe Freeholder in this Province" (p. 139). Fowke, a prominent emigrant Royalist to Virginia, had married Anne, the widow of Job Chandler (d. 1659), a former justice of Charles County, and seems afterwards to have divided his time between Charles County, Maryland, and Westmoreland County, Virginia (Md. Hist. Mag. XVI, 1921; 1-16). Humphrey Warren did not take his seat, however, until the November, 1668, court (p. 144); he disappeared from the court after the March, 1670/1, session. With these slight changes the court, numbering seven, remained practically unchanged until September 16, 1670, when a new commission for nine justices, with Henry Bonner as clerk, was issued by Governor Calvert (Arch. Md. V, 75). Adams, Mathews, and a new member, John Stone, son of former Governor William Stone, were designated as "of the quorum", with Pope, Wade, Harrison, Lindsay, and Warren reappointed as associate justices, together with a new associate, John Bowles. This bench remained unchanged, with the exception of Lindsay, who died in 1670, and Pope, in 1671, until a new bench with many new names was appointed, August 1, 1672 (Arch. Md. LI, 81-3). In addition to the five holdover members, Adams, Mathews, Stone, Wade, and Bowles, there were six new members of the court added, bringing the membership up to the high figure of eleven. The new justices were Ignatius Causine, William Barton, Jr., John Douglas, Thomas Hussey, Robert Henley, and Stephen Montague. Philip Gibbon was appointed clerk of the court. Harrison, who had been a member of the court since 1660, was not reappointed, doubtless on account of ill health, as he died soon afterward. The membership of the court, as appointed in 1672, remained unchanged until after the close of the period covered by this volume, with the exception of Montague, who sat but once, dying a few weeks after his appointment.

Of the justices just mentioned, Henry Adams and Thomas Mathews, who sat during the 1666-1674 period, and John Stone, appointed in 1670, are known to have been of the quorum. A county court could not legally function unless at least one of the justices of the quorum or a member of the Governor's Council, was present. Adams, who is always mentioned first, was obviously the presiding justice. During the years 1665-1666 when he served as sheriff he could not legally sit. Lindsay, who died in 1670, was doubtless also of the quorum for, at three sessions in 1666 and one in 1668, he is first named on the court minutes, and the court functioned when he sat without Adams or Mathews being present. Only once do we find a member of the Governor's Council sitting on the Charles County court during this period. This was at the June, 1671, session, when Sir William Talbot, Baronet, a member of the Council and the Provincial Secretary, was present and presiding, although it is not recorded that any business was transacted at this meeting (p. 333).

Most of the members of the court were the prominent men in the county, and several of them had held other public offices such as burgess or sheriff. The attendance was ordinarily very good but, for some unexplained reason, this slumped badly in 1674. At the January court of this year, Stone, Wade, Henley, Douglas, Barton, and Hussey, were each fined for non-appearance, and at the November court Stone and Causine were amerced for the same reason "in accordance to the Act of Assembly" (pp. 515, 590). The amount of the fine is not stated. At a former session held in 1664, justices had been fined for absence at the request of litigants (Arch. Md. LIII, 511). The religious affiliations of the members of the court are of some interest. Of the four justices of the quorum of this period, Henry Adams, Thomas Mathews, James Lindsay, and John Stone, the first three were Roman Catholics. Of the thirteen associate judges only one, Ignatius Causine, is known to have been a Catholic.

The Charles County Court before 1675 seems to have met at inns or houses in the neighborhood of Portobacco. This is disclosed by items in the county levies showing payments to innkeepers. In compliance with the act of the Assembly of 1674, requiring each county in the Province to erect or provide a suitable court house and prison (Arch. Md. II, 413-414), Charles County purchased on November 10, 1674, from John Allen, one acre of land, part of Moore's Lodge in Zachia Hundred, to the southeast of where the town of Portobacco stood, Allen obligating himself to erect a court house and a prison thereon for a total of 20,000 pounds of tobacco for land and buildings (pp. 615-618). Interesting architectural details about the buildings erected upon it are discussed later in this Introduction (pp. xlv-xlvii). Allen also obligated himself to keep the buildings, the foundations excepted, in repair "forever", and to keep nearby "a public ordinary".

THE CLERK OF THE COURT

The clerkship of the court during the period covered by this nine year record was several times in a chaotic condition. George Thompson was clerk when the record opened. He appears as clerk on March 11, 1665/6 (Arch. Md. III; 539), and signs a paper as such between the March and June, 1666, court sessions (p. 11). He had served as clerk since his appointment May 25, 1658, except during the period of Fendall's rebellion in 1660, when Thomas Lomax held this position under Fendall (Arch. Md. LIII, lxvii). How long Thompson continued to hold the clerkship is uncertain, however. Neither this record nor the minutes of the Provincial Court discloses, but it may have been until the close of the year 1667, when another clerk was commissioned. Thompson's fight, or impromptu duel, with Thomas Oakley at Edmund Lindsey's inn, in which he wounded Oakley with a rapier, did not take place until some two years after he ceased to be clerk, so could have played no part in bringing about the change (Arch. Md. LVII, xxxiv-xxxv).

On December 23, 1667, a new commission for justices was issued and at the same time Richard Boughton was formally commissioned as clerk (Arch. Md. V; 21). Due to the error of the recording clerk who made the original entry in the Council proceedings, this commission appears as dated 1672. This error is to be found both in the original entry in the manuscript Council Liber H H, and also in the printed Archives (V; 21), the latter being a faithful copy of Liber H H. That the original date of entry, "December xxiiij; MDCLxxij", as found in Liber H H (folio 188) is an error due to the careless use of an "x" instead of a small "v" for the sixth letter of the year date, is disclosed not only by adjoining entries which are correctly dated, but by the fact that the commissioners or justices named in the same commission formed the bench of 1667, and not that of 1672 (Arch. Md. V; 21).

Richard Boughton, who succeeded Thompson as clerk, had been commissioned, May 17, 1666, Provincial Secretary, a member of the Governor's Council, and a Judge of the Provincial Court. His formal appointment as clerk of the Charles County Court was made, as stated above, on December 23, 1667. It is most unlikely that he held at the same time the three important Provincial positions of secretary, councillor, and judge, and the office of county clerk. He was almost certainly no longer in office, when, in the spring of 1669, he was summoned by the sheriff of Charles County before the court (p. 187). Although one suspects, the record does not disclose, what was charged against him at the hearing which doubtless followed. Light, however, is thrown upon the difficulties which had resulted in his losing the clerkship, in a suit for slander which he filed at the August, 1669, court, against Nicholas Emanson (Emerson), an innkeeper. It appears that the innkeeper had circulated reports that Boughton's fee accounts as clerk of the worshipful court were dishonest, and Boughton declared that these slanderous rumors had resulted in his being "at p'sent destitute of employment", and that his "future preform" was thereby jeopardized. It appears that the innkeeper had also said that it was Boughton's "reall intention to goe for Eng^{land} this year" to defraud his creditors, and that he had not paid the innkeeper for the liquors drunk at his wedding. The court refused, however, to allow the suit for slander to come before a jury, for, it declared, no damage had been shown (pp. 212-214). The suit for slander was the result of a suit for debt entered by the innkeeper against Boughton for 2703 pounds of tobacco, in great part for drinks consumed at his recent marriage (p. 214). The court gave judgment for the innkeeper and Boughton appealed to the Provincial Court (Arch. Md. LVII; 538-539). The appeal does not seem to have been prosecuted. Some eighteen months later we find Boughton in prison for the debt which he owed to Emanson, and probably also for debts owed to others as well (Arch. Md. LI; 358). When, in 1671 and again in 1674, the sheriff sought to serve a warrant upon Boughton in suits for debt, he could not be found (pp. 349, 518, 549). Our record discloses that on June 24, 1668, Verlinda Burdit, widow of Thomas Burdit of Nangemy Creek, "before th^e marriage intended to be Consummated between me and M^r Richard Boughton", had made a deed of gift of cattle and a slave to her four Burdit children (pp. 133-134). Mrs. Burdit was the daughter of the Reverend William Cotton, minister of Lower Accomac Parish, Virginia, whose sister Verlinda was the wife of Governor William Stone of Maryland (Va. Mag. VI, 1899, p. 405). It was to celebrate this wedding that Boughton had overextended himself in the purchase of liquor. He seems to have retrieved his fortunes later, as he not only represented Charles County in the Lower House of Assembly in 1669, but was clerk of the Upper House from 1674 to 1676 and Deputy Commissary of the Prerogative Court. He died in 1706, when his estate was administered upon by his son, Samuel Boughton. In addition to his landholdings in Charles County, where he lived, he owned two large tracts of land in Baltimore County. One wonders whether he may not be the same Richard Boughton, who, described as the son of Thomas Boughton, armiger [one entitled to bear heraldic arms], of Bilton, county Warwick, was admitted as a student of law to Gray's Inn, London, February, 1647/8. (Foster's Register of Admissions to Gray's Inn, Vol. 2, part 1, p. 247).

The next clerk of Charles County of which we have a record was Henry Bonner. A deposition shows that he was twenty-two years old about the time that he became clerk in 1669 (p. 540). He had apparently only very recently arrived in the Province. Bonner, like Boughton, had a checkered career as clerk. He had apparently taken over the office of clerk, or was acting as deputy clerk, about the time Boughton got into difficulties in the summer of 1669, because, when in June, 1670, he was sued by John Hatch for debt, he sought to evade suit by asking for a "writ of privilege", declaring that Hatch was "not proceeding according to law & privileges allowed th^e Clarke of the Court", and was granted a "nonsuite" (pp. 258-259). No record of his formal appointment to the clerkship by the Governor, however, has been found before September 16, 1670, when he was recommissioned (Arch. Md. V; 75). About a year later he no longer held that office, as he is referred to as "late clerk", when at the November, 1671, county court, the grand jury investigated charges made to the Governor against him by John Helme for "mischarging certain Fees." The Grand Jury found that his account was "erroneous", but did not find it "presentable" (p. 356). The record does not show whether or not he resumed office, but it is unlikely that he did, as on August 1, 1672, Philip Gibbon was appointed clerk. At the November, 1674, court, immediately after the death of Philip Gibbon, who had succeeded him as clerk, "it was ordered that M^r Henry Bonner shall be Clerke to th^e Comission^{rs} below for drawing of warrants & hues & Cryes & mitimus's or any such like businesse" (p. 590). This looks more like an appointment for special duties than as a formal reappointment to the full county clerkship. His subsequent career has not been traced. In 1670 Bonner married Elizabeth, the widow of Walter Story, a London merchant, who had settled in Charles County. They became involved in various law suits in connection with their own affairs and the Story estate, and were both apparently in prison for debt in 1672 (Arch. Md. II, 459-460; LI, passim). Bonner appears to have lived in the upper part of Charles County, which later became Prince George's, as his will, dated and probated in October, 1702, refers to him as of Prince George's, and vests his entire estate, including large land holdings on Bush River, Baltimore County, in his wife, Elizabeth.

A somewhat nebulous figure is Philip Gibbon who succeeded Bonner and was formally commissioned "Clerke and keeper of the Records and proceedings" of the Charles County Court, August 1, 1672 (Arch. Md. LI, 83). It seems likely that Gibbon had acted as clerk since his predecessor had gotten into difficulties about a year before Gibbon's formal appointment in 1672. Nowhere, however, in the court records do we find him designating himself as clerk or signing himself as such. He appears as a witness to sundry legal papers during the years 1671-1674. The testamentary records show that Gibbon died intestate and that his estate was administered upon November 6, 1674, by Benjamin Rozer. As told in the preceding paragraph, it was at the November 10, 1674, session, that Henry Bonner received the curiously phrased appointment as clerk to the justices "for drawing warrants & hues & Cryes & Mittimus's or any such like businesse", which undoubtedly meant that he was made acting clerk, with limited authority and functions, immediately following Gibbon's death. Gibbon seems to have been a more efficient clerk than Boughton or Bonner. There are fewer obvious omissions in his entries in the court proceedings. There seems to be no reason to believe that he was in Maryland before his appearance in Charles County early in 1671. It seems probable that he had recently come over from England with the promise of office, an office he was destined to hold for less than three years before his death in the autumn of 1674. He purchased in September, 1673, two small plantations of 150 acres on Portobacco Creek for 6500 pounds of tobacco, which he sold six months later to Benjamin Rozer for 5600 pounds (pp. 540-4). He doubtless lived in the town of Port Tobacco.

THE SHERIFF

The sheriff, or high sheriff as he is occasionally called to distinguish him from an under sheriff or deputy, was an important county official. During the period covered by this volume the sheriff of each county was chosen annually by the Governor from three names nominated to him by the justices of the several county courts. The sheriff received no salary but was paid by fees, and the office was quite a profitable one. The duties and powers of the sheriff have been fully discussed by the editor in a previous volume of the Archives (LIII, xxxix-xl). The sheriff at this period was prohibited by law from acting as attorney in his own court. One of the justices, Henry Adams, who had been appointed sheriff April 20, 1665, and sworn in on June 13 (ibid. 572-573), still held office when this record begins. He appointed Samuel Cressey, the attorney, his under sheriff or deputy sheriff. He was succeeded as sheriff by another justice, Thomas Mathews, who was sworn in at the June, 1666, court, and appointed Thomas Allanson his under sheriff (pp. 21-22). A sheriff could not sit as a justice. Benjamin Rozer received his appointment as sheriff April 15, 1667 (Arch. Md. V; 4) and was reappointed April 1, 1668 (ibid. 27). These court records show that he continued to act as sheriff during the years 1669, 1670, 1671, and early in the year 1672, although no actual record of his annual appointment after 1668 can be found. Jonathan Marler and Samuel Cressey appear as under sheriffs in writs dated 1668 in the Rozer period (pp. 105, 139). It may be added that Rozer, who was followed by John Allen in 1672, was reappointed sheriff September 8, 1674, serving in that office until several years afterwards (Arch. Md. LI; 131, 204). Allen, recently a London merchant, had been in Maryland only a few years (p. 504). On November 8, 1672, Allen appears as sheriff (p. 428), and was still in office in August, 1674, when the coroner returned writs in suits in which Allen was a plaintiff (p. 573). As of some interest in this connection, the court record reveals that the sheriff's imprisonment charges for the custody for five days of a prominent defendant, Samuel Fendall, were 100 pounds of tobacco, or 20 pounds a day; and that the charge for the arrest of this same person was a fee of 55 pounds (p. 437).

THE CORONER

The functions of a coroner usually had been combined either with those of sheriff, or county clerk, or constable, until the passage of the act of April-May, 1666. This provided for the appointment by the Governor "from time to time" of a suitable person in each county as coroner, to whom was to be administered the same form of oath as that used for coroners in England (Arch. Md. II; 130-131). Fees for the coroner are not mentioned in this act, but in 1671 the coroner's fee for "viewing the bodies" of those "dead by misadventure", was fixed at 250 pounds of tobacco; and in cases where the coroner acted for a disqualified sheriff, as in the arrest of the sheriff himself, or where the sheriff appeared as plaintiff in a suit, the coroner's fee was fixed at 40 pounds (Arch. Md. II; 292-294). There is only one mention of the appointment of a coroner for Charles County during the entire period covered by this volume, either here, or in the proceedings of the Governor and Council, or in the proceedings of the Provincial Court. This was when Thomas Thorowgood was sworn in as coroner on August 7, 1667 (p. 95). How long he served is not known. It is revealed by this record, however, from entries in which fees for the coroner are mentioned in the county levies, or where the coroner acted instead of the sheriff, that Ignatius Causine was the coroner of Charles County in the years 1671, 1672, and 1674 (313-316, 348, 362-363, 431, 587). It seems most likely that Causine, who became one of the justices of the Charles County court in 1672, served as coroner during all the later period covered by this volume.

CONSTABLES

Constables for the several county hundreds were appointed by the county courts. On account of the carelessness or indifference of the court clerks, notations of the actual appointment by the court of constables are almost entirely lacking in the Charles County records of this period. The one such appointment recorded is that on March 10, 1670/1, when Henry Hawkins, constable for Portobacco Hundred was sworn in (p. 317). The court on several occasions fined constables for their failure to be present at court sessions as was required by law. We have the record of fines imposed, or remitted, in 1668, 1671, and 1674, upon the following constables: Thomas Hussey, Owen Jones, John Newton, William Barton, Jr., Gilbert Corner, Francis Thornton, William Boyden, Alexander White (p. 144); Joseph Cooper, John Dobs, and William Russell (pp. 356, 529, 590). The fine imposed for non-attendance of a constable at a court session was 1000 pounds of tobacco.

ATTORNEYS

The court records were kept in such a way that it is often not possible to know whether litigants were represented by attorneys at law or by mere attorneys in fact. Both, especially in the earlier years, appeared before the court. Attorneys in fact can usually be recognized by a letter of attorney (power of attorney) filed in court, authorizing some person to appear in court and act for another in a given cause, or to execute a deed, or to perform some other specified legal function. Following the restoration of the Province to the Calverts in 1658 the legal work conducted before the court passed more and more into the hands of professional lawyers. By this it is not meant that the attorneys at law practicing in the Provincial and county courts devoted themselves exclusively to its practice, for nearly all of them were planters as well. During the period covered by this record, the great bulk of the business before the Charles County courts came to be carried on by a comparatively small group of local attorneys at law.

The attorneys at law who most frequently appear in Charles County at this time are Benjamin Rozer, Samuel Cressey, and John Jones. Rozer, Cressey, and Jones first appeared as attorneys in the years 1662-1663. Cressey died in 1675. Jones was in active practice when this record closes. Rozer, when sheriff, did not practice. Richard Boughton and Henry Bonner, both of whom had held the office of clerk of the court, after their retirement as clerks, frequently represented clients before the court. The act of 1666 prohibited county justices, clerks, and sheriffs from practicing as attorneys before their own court (Arch. Md. II; 132). Just before the close of the 1666-1674 period we find a few formal entries in the court minutes of men sworn in as attorneys. Thus at the September, 1674 court, Mr. Henry Bonner and Mr. John Jones were "sworne as Attorney of this Court by th^e Worshipfull th^e Comission^{rs} of th^e s^d Court" (p. 586). This formal action was the result of the recent passage of a law with the amusing title, "an act to reform the attorneys, councellors and solicitors at law of this Province", passed at the May-June, 1674, General Assembly, restricting practice by attorneys before the county courts to those sworn in respectively by each county court (Arch. Md. II; 409-411).

That the court believed that lawyers stirred up trouble between servants and their masters is indicated by an order of the Charles County Court at the March, 1673, session, prohibiting any attorney from appearing for a servant against a master without having first obtained the approval of the court (p. 496). The act of 1674, which fixed 200 pounds of tobacco as the maximum fee that might be charged by an attorney in a case, had the result which might have been expected. Prior to its passage, when costs of suit were assessed against the losing litigant, a fee of 60 pounds of tobacco was invariably allowed by the court to the lawyer of the successful litigant as one of the "costs". But immediately after the passage of the 1674 act invariably the maximum fee permitted under the act, 200 pounds of tobacco, was allowed in the bill of costs as the fee to be paid by the loser to the attorney of the successful litigant. Beginning with the September, 1674, session, the new ceiling figure of 200 pounds appears on the record. But it is not disclosed whether the unsuccessful litigant always paid his own attorney the maximum fee; one suspects that he often did not.

There was so great carelessness and such lack of uniformity in the way the several clerks and deputy clerks entered and recorded both civil and criminal cases during the nine-year period covered by this record, that it is difficult to give figures as to their actual number and character. There were unquestionably numerous omissions. Certainly, much of human interest with which the earlier Charles County record, that for 1658-1665/6, was replete, is lacking in this volume. There is scarcely any mention of neighborhood brawls, or details of sex irregularities, that are so vividly described in the earlier records. It is only in an occasional damage suit for personal injuries, or for slander, that the human or personal side of community life is spread before us.

CIVIL SUITS

During this period the record shows that at least four hundred civil cases came up for trial before the court, and this in a county which had an estimated average population at the time of about eighteen hundred. This is an average of some forty-five civil suits a year, a rather large volume of litigation to have actually come before the court. But this figure does not tell fully the story of the litigiousness of the community. The number of writs or warrants issued for service by the sheriff is a better measure. There is a record of about seven hundred warrants served during the nine-year period, or nearly eighty a year. Many of those summoned to court as defendants by these writs never came up for trial as the cases were settled out of court. Some were "referred", or postponed, for hearing at the next court and were doubtless settled as they are not heard of again. Litigiousness, as measured by the number of sheriff's writs, is also deceptive, as some of these writs, perhaps a third, were served, not on defendants but on witnesses. If the number of plaintiffs is added, perhaps some nine hundred or more persons, about a hundred a year, either appeared before the court or had their cases settled out of court. In a number of instances, cases never came up in court because defendants had fled or had concealed themselves, and warrants could not be served by the sheriff; these writs were returned by him as "non est inventus." If, however, the absent defendant owned property in the county the court might hear the suit and order execution upon the defendant's property. It is probable that, for every three cases in which preliminary steps were taken for suit, not more than two actually came to trial.

Debt was by far the most frequent cause of civil litigation. Over ninety percent of all the cases which came before the court were for debt. Most of these debts were secured by a "bill of debt", the equivalent of a modern promissory note, and the judgment of the court in such cases was promptly given. It would appear that to protect themselves, executors and administrators of estates, before paying a debt about which there was the least question, preferred to secure an order of the court to make payment. The amounts sued for varied from a few pounds to two thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine pounds of tobacco. If the amount was three thousand pounds or more the Provincial and not the county court had jurisdiction. If the defendant refused, or was unable to make payment as ordered by the court, he was imprisoned by the sheriff until a settlement satisfactory to the creditor was made.

Many suits were thrown out by the court, a nonsuit being granted, with costs charged against the plaintiff. These costs included allowances to witnesses, fees to the attorney of the defendant who was the successful litigant, and jury expenses if there was a jury. Quite a number of suits were thrown out because they had not been entered within the two year time limit fixed under the act of 1666, for "the limitation of certain actions for avoiding suits at law" (Arch. Md. II; 201-202). The majority of the suits for debt were tried before the court, but in a considerable number the cases were tried before a jury. Reference to a petit jury might be made at the request of either the plaintiff, or the defendant, or by the court itself on its own initiative. Twenty-six jury trials are recorded in this volume.

There are recorded a few suits for damages for assault and battery and also for slander. References to some of the more interesting of these will be found elsewhere in this Introduction (p. xxiv-xxv). The index will serve as a key to various other types of civil actions which came before the court, but are not of sufficient interest to the general reader to be discussed here. Among them are a number of suits for wages in dispute. Disputes about land, especially land boundaries, were rather frequent. These will also be found discussed in another section of this Introduction (pp. xxxix-xlii). Suits for damages for killing or stealing hogs, cattle, or horses, are also discussed in a later section (pp. xxiii-xxv). These suits, especially those for the killing of ear-marked hogs running at large, had both civil and criminal aspects. Damages were payable to the owner, a fine to the Lord Proprietary, and a reward to the informer. It is of interest that down to the September, 1667, session of the court, suits for debt were for the amount of the debt alone and costs of suit, but beginning with this session and thereafter, damages in addition to the amount of the debt and costs, were nearly always asked, but rarely, if ever, granted by the court.

CRIMINAL JURISDICTIONS

The criminal jurisdiction of the county court was largely confined to breaches of the peace, and misdemeanors which did not involve loss of life or member as punishment, the more serious felonies going directly to the Provincial Court. The criminal entries for the period covered by this volume are so few and so defective, that one wonders whether there may not have been a separate record book kept for them which has in course of time been lost; but it seems more likely that this was due to carelessness on the part of the changing personnel in the clerk's office. Or perhaps it was due to the fact that fees were not paid to the clerk for entering the records of criminal cases in the court minutes, as was the case in civil suits. At only one court session are we specifically told that no criminal cases came before the court. At the March, 1667, court session there is an entry that the grand jury gave its "verdict That they found noe person worthy of Presentm^t for anie mindemean^{rs} ag^t th^e lawes of this Prov" (p. 62).

GRAND JURY

A grand jury is mentioned at only six of the fifty-five recorded sessions of the court held during our period (pp. 62, 144, 356, 372, 439, 518). Under an act of Assembly passed in 1666, the county courts were required twice a year to have impanelled by the sheriff a grand jury to inquire into offenses against all the good laws of the Province (Arch. Md. II; 141-142). There is no reason to believe that the Charles County Court, or the sheriff, failed to comply with this act, as there were penalties provided for failure to do so. The fact that at only six of these sessions, over a nine year period, is there any notation that a grand jury had met, is certainly due to the carelessness and indifference of the clerk of the court to make such an entry in the minutes, for even had the grand jury met only twice a year, which is most unlikely, there must have been at least eighteen grand juries which met during this nine year period. The law does not stipulate the number of jurymen which constituted a grand jury. As a matter of fact, the number seemed to vary in an arbitrary way. At the January, 1671/2, and November, 1672, sessions, a grand jury of fifteen members was impanelled, while at the March, 1671/2, session, the grand jury was composed of nineteen members (pp. 356, 372, 439). At the November, 1668, court, four persons "summoned by the sheriff to fill the grand jury and not appearing" were fined (p. 144).

Not a single one of the criminal cases is recorded in which all the picturesque and often sordid details of the evidence are presented, as will be found in the earlier county court records printed in Volumes LIII and LIV of the Archives, as well as in the Provincial Court records. In some instances, however, details are found in civil suits for damages as the result of assaults, or for slanderous speeches charging hog-stealing, theft, etc. Occasionally the court required an individual to give bond that he keep the peace, or that he would prosecute some one accused of hog-stealing (p. 311).

HOG STEALING

Hog-stealing as a crime has been discussed by the editor at length in a previous volume of the Archives, so need not be enlarged upon here (Arch. Md. LII; xxxi). Hog-stealing, by which was usually meant the killing of ear-marked swine running at large which belonged to others, was looked on as a most serious offense. Only first offenders were ordinarily tried in the county courts; more flagrant or repeated offenders were sent up to the Provincial Court, the law providing even the death penalty for the third offense. Hog-stealing was not only a crime against the dignity of the Lord Proprietary and one to be severely punished, but, as has been said before, was a cause for a civil suit for damages against the offender by the owner of the hogs; and a reward to the informer was also allowed. These cases usually first came before the grand jury on information by a constable, this being followed by indictment by the grand jury. The trial that followed was usually before a petit jury, but might be tried before the court, as the accused elected.

At the March, 1669/70, court, Captain James Neale, a wealthy planter, prosecuted, and sought damages from, three former servants of his, although at the time of trial no longer in his service, for killing and eating, about a year previously, a number of his hogs, and for stealing and drinking "a great quantity" of his wine. The evidence is presented at great length and in amusing detail. The entire servant population of the plantation seemingly had a wonderful time. The hogs were killed and eaten on several occasions at one of Neale's plantation quarters by these three servants and by other fellow servants, and the entertainments, which occurred about Christmas time, were enlivened by the lavish use of their master's wine. This was stolen from his "Wine house", by the use of the key of the corn loft, which, luckily for the celebrants, also opened the wine house. The parties must have been hilarious as those who took part in them not only drank as much as they pleased at the wine house, "but also they Carried with them up to the Quarter two or three pales full of Wine every week for three weekes att least the paile Containeing two or three Gallons." Sentinels were posted to see that they were not caught. There must have been some extenuating circumstances as the jury found damages against them for only 225 pounds of tobacco, and costs of 660 pounds. Although there were twelve such "trespasses" only four hogs had been killed while the three defendants were in Neale's service, the rest having been killed after they had become free (pp. 251-254).

Two damages suits were instituted for slander on account of assertions or insinuations of hog-stealing. One was tried before the court and one before a jury. In the first case, heard at the January, 1670/1, court, neighbors were declared to have been advised by Francis Fernley to have a care to mark their hogs, as John Mould, the plaintiff in the slander suit, "was often abroad to hunt wild hoggs." The court found no cause for action and granted Fernley a nonsuit (p. 311). This same John Mould, at the November, 1672, court, was bound over to keep the peace and to appear at the next court, but whether this had any bearing upon his difficulties with Fernley nearly a year before, is not disclosed, nor do we again hear of the matter (p. 441). In the second case a defendant was charged with calling the plaintiff a hogstealer. He denied having done so, and asked a jury trial. The jury found no cause for action and the court granted a nonsuit with costs to the plaintiff (p. 507). Upon the complaint of a prominent planter and one of the justices, Humphrey Warren, a certain Hugh French was ordered at the January, 1670/1, court, to give security for his good behavior, but the record does not disclose what Warren had done to have aroused French's ire against him (p. 281).

A suit for 1500 pounds of tobacco for personal damages, brought by Thomas Price at the August, 1672, court, against Captain James Neale, discloses the details of a free-for-all fight between Price on the one hand and Captain James Neale and his son James on the other. Witnesses had seen the son at his father's plantation fighting with Price. James junior called for help, the father struck Price two or three times and pushed him off the boy. Another witness declared that Price had "pulled much hair from the head of th^e said James", the son. A jury awarded to Price 400 pounds of tobacco as damages and costs of 150 pounds (p. 396). In another case a servant girl, Marie Ellis, at the September, 1667, court, brought suit for 500 pounds of tobacco against Alexander Smyth and his maid servant, Elizabeth Taylor. Smyth accused Marie, who at the time was his servant, but when the suit was filed in the service of another, with having stolen a coife. Smyth sent Elizabeth Taylor to recover the coife. To clear her name Marie allowed Elizabeth to search among her linen but the coife was not to be found, whereupon Elizabeth then "did beate and abuse her verie much and did throw th^e said Marie over a tree several times calling her Hore to make use and lie with men", and "struck her with her fist", and finally went off with Marie's holland apron. The plaintiff declared that she was so disabled as to be unable to serve Mr. Philpott to whom she had hired herself, and that the cure of a "verie sore Legge" had been much hindered by the assault. The jury awarded Marie 50 pounds of tobacco as damages, and costs and found Alexander Smyth an accessory because he had not returned the apron to Marie (pp. 100-103). One of the witnesses in the case said that he had seen the assault when he was working at "goodie Michels"; this is doubtless Joan Mitchell (Michael), widow of Thomas Mitchell, about whom insinuations of witchcraft had been made a few years before (Arch. Md. LIII, lv).

One of the few cases in this period in which there is recorded a sentence for committing a misdemeanor was that of William Taylor, doubtless a servant, who was ordered to have ten "slaches" upon his bare back for stealing a pair of stockings, "but by his submission to the court the worshipfull Commissioners was pleased to remit the punishment" (p. 565).

SEX RELATIONS

The most curious of all the "to-keep-the-peace" cases was that in which a man, possibly a too importunate suitor, was ordered by the court to keep away from a girl. At the August, 1667, court, Joseph Peters "was cleared and freed by Proclamation." The case had come up upon the complaint of a planter William Perfoite. The court ordered that Peters remain in the hands of the sheriff until he gave his own bond that "he comes not into the company of Anna Bramstone any more & that if they happen to meet he avoid her Company & th^t he should not beate William Perfaite nor come upon his plantacon" (p. 261). The June, 1666, county court, acting under orders of the Provincial Court, proclaimed a certain Mary Marler an outlaw (p. 12). No other reference to her is to be found in these records. The case of Mary Marler of Portobacco, a spinster, found guilty of infanticide in the Provincial Court at the April, 1666, session, has already been treated in full in the introduction to a previous volume of the Archives (LVII, xxx). When the sheriff went to bring the prisoner, who had been found guilty, into court for sentence, he found that she "Had broke prison and fled for it, Whereupon Proclamacon made three times that if she came not in, to be Outlawed." None of the records disclose whether she was caught or, if so, what was her fate.

As usual a number of bastardy cases and cases of a man and woman accused of unlawful cohabitation came before the court during this period. There are in all fifteen such sex cases recorded. The records show that the woman involved might be ordered a whipping or be fined, but whippings seem to be less frequent than in the previous decade, servants alone being the victims. The father of a bastard child, if a servant, was usually accorded the same treatment as the woman, but if a freeman, was obliged to give bond that the child would not become a public charge. The criminal record for the period covered by this volume was, however, so badly kept by the changing and irresponsible clerks or deputy clerks, that we are left in the dark as to whether a whipping or any other punishment was meted out to eight of the women presented for bastardy. Bastardy and unlawful cohabitation cases were ordinarily brought before the grand jury by one of the constables and, if the evidence justified, were presented for trial. Thus, at the 1671 court, Francis Lamb was ordered to give security for 10,000 pounds of tobacco to keep the county harmless from the care of "a bastard child by him begotten on the body of Anne Broadhead." The latter, a servant, was presented at the same court for bastardy, but the record does not disclose her punishment. The amount of the bond alone proves that Lamb was not a servant (pp. 355-356). Obadiah Dunn and Elizabeth Francis were presented for having a "bastard child abortive they both burying of it & concealing of it", but the punishment was voided when a planter, Robert Rowland, agreed to pay to the Lord Proprietary the 200 pounds of tobacco fine imposed on each of the principals (p. 519). At the same court Margaret Ward, living at Captain Hugh Oneal's was fined 500 pounds for bastardy, Ralph Coates going security to pay the fine due to the Lord Proprietary (p. 519); while Ann Ward, whose case was called the same day, could not be found by the sheriff (p. 519). Margaret Evans was fined 500 pounds of tobacco at the January, 1674, court, for bastardy, and Peter Carr "where she liveth" paid the fine to the Lord Proprietary (p. 518).

Two cases where a man and a woman were unlawfully living together, and a near breach of promise suit, came before the court. Joane Langford had George Harris summoned before the court and accused "th^e said George for begetting a Bastard Child on her Body, and for Nonperformance of his promise to Marry her, or set her free." George was ordered to give bond for 1500 pounds of tobacco to save the county harmless for the maintenance of the bastard child, and to pay "Two hundred and fifty pounds of tobacco to th^e Wife of John Cofer for tending on th^e said Joane in her Laying in." He also paid a fine of 500 pounds to "acquit and set free the said Joane of th^e penalty of Whipping" (pp. 141-142). At the court held in November, 1672, there were two similar presentments by the grand jury. Elinor Warren was charged with "beading [bedding] and entertaining Thomas Howell for the space of Six weeks in her house and not lawfully married to him" (p. 439). There is evidence that Elinor Warren was a woman of some property (pp. 350, 364). Susanna Dunn, the wife of Thomas Dunn of "the upper county of Rapahannock in Virginia" and Philip Cary of Mattawoman, Charles County, were presented, she for absenting herself from her husband, and he for keeping her over two years and living together as man and wife; and she also for having had a bastard child by him about a year previous (p. 439). The outcome of neither of these cases is revealed by the record.

ORPHANS

So few references are found to orphans and orphans' estates in the nine years covered by this record, that one wonders if a separate entry book for such matters may not have been since lost, as acts of the Assembly specifically provided that at least one session a year "for orphans", preferably in June, be held (Arch. Md. LIII, xxxvii). Mention may be found of a few instances where very young orphans had been bound out until of age, in one case to a godfather (p. 497). When children of upper class planters were left orphans, where there was sufficient estate to care for them, other provision seems to have been made for them by the court. Thus, when Arthur Turner's five children were left orphans in 1667, the youngest was then only about a month old. The Turner family was broken up and prominent men were appointed guardians for them. Arthur, the eldest son, chose as his guardian, Josias Fendall, a former Governor. The second son chose Walter Beane, a justice of the court; the third son, James Bolling, a prominent planter; Ann, a daughter, was apprenticed until sixteen years old to William Marshall, until recently one of the justices, to "remain with him unless married" until she was twenty-one. The youngest, a month old infant, was put out to nurse with Susanna Taylor, who was allowed 800 pounds of tobacco if the child died within six months, with 800 pounds more if he died between the ages of six and eighteen months. That all did not go well with these arrangements, and apparently also with Turner's estate, is shown by the fact that soon afterwards some of the guardians were changed, and provision was made for the care of certain of the children in the county levy (pp. 106, 142, 144, 229, 230). It may be recalled that Turner, some six years before, had appeared in a most unpleasant role in a bastardy case in which the mother of the child, Lucy Stratton, his servant, preferred a whipping to marriage with him, on the ground that "hee was a lustful, very lustful man" (Arch. Md. LIII, xxviii-xxix).

APPEALS

There are six instances noted in this record in which appeals from the Charles County Court to the Provincial Court were asked. As described in a former volume of the Archives (LIII, xxiv-xxv), there were four methods by which cases in the county courts might be removed to the Provincial Court, to which the interested reader is referred. In five of these six instances in which appeals were asked the cases seem to have been referred to the higher court by a direct appeal entered in the Charles County Court at the time of the trial. In the one instance in which an appeal was denied, it is to be noted that one of the justices dissented from the refusal of the lower court to grant an appeal.

The suit of the administrators of the estate of Dr. John (Jacob) Lumbrozo against Richard Dodd for a debt of 400 pounds of tobacco for rum and sugar, was heard at the November, 1667, court. As the plaintiffs could not produce their books of account, which had been lost, the court gave judgment against the plaintiffs, because their suit was "not justlie proved by one single evidence." The plaintiffs then craved an appeal to the Provincial Court, which the county court overruled, notwithstanding the fact that "Mr Will. Marshall assenteth not to the over-ruling of the appeale but is of opinion that there ought to be an appeale" (pp. 48-49). It is to be noted that on a former occasion in 1664, Justice Marshall dissented from an opinion by all the other members of the Charles County Court (Arch. Md. LIII, p. 515). Dissents were most unusual in the county courts.

There was an appeal taken in a case heard at the September, 1667, court, in which an indentured servant was given his freedom by a jury in the Charles County Court. This was the case of David Ralston against his master, Daniel Johnson, which involved a demand by the latter for additional time of Ralston's servitude, which had been lost when, it was claimed, he had been a runaway from a former master. An appeal to the Provincial Court craved by Johnson was granted, but was not prosecuted by him (pp. 108-110). The case is discussed in some length in another section of this Introduction (pp. xxxvi-xxxvii).

Appeals were entered by the defendant at the January, 1667/8, court, in two suits involving money due for building construction by Thomas Alcocks, a carpenter, against George Thompson, late clerk of the Charles County Court. These appeals to the Provincial Court were granted to Thompson, apparently before the county court had heard and given judgment in the two cases (pp. 113-114). As the cases were never heard in the Provincial Court, nor did they come up again in the county court, it is to be presumed that they were "composed", or settled out of court. Both suits, which were for payments due for buildings constructed by Alcocks for Thompson, are of considerable interest to students of Colonial architecture and building. They are more fully discussed from this standpoint in another section (xlvi-xlvii).

At the June, 1668, court, the suit of Robert Sampson against William Thomas was heard. Sampson, in a plea of detinue, sued Thomas for 1500 pounds of tobacco, claimed to be due him for sundry goods sold to Thomas. After hearing the evidence, a jury gave their verdict for the defendant, who was represented by his attorney, William Calvert of St. Mary's. The plaintiff, represented by Henry Neale, entered an appeal (pp. 135, 138). As nothing further is heard of the case, in either the Provincial Court or the Charles County Court, it was presumably settled out of court.

At this same June, 1668, court, Walter Peake (Pake) of St. Mary's County, sued Miles Chaffe, who he said, was a "Nonresident person" for a debt of 795 pounds of tobacco and damages, on a bill for debt which was not yet due. Peake, represented by his attorney, William Price, asked that Chaffe, as a nonresident, be compelled to give security. The defendant denied that he was a nonresident and said that he had agreed, for his accommodation within the county, to undertake several employments which would enable him to pay his debt. The court, on the ground that the writ of arrest by which Chaffe was brought into court did not specify that any security be given, gave judgment in favor of the defendant. William Price, as attorney, entered an appeal to the Provincial Court, which was granted, and liberty was given to transmit a copy of the proceedings to the higher court (p. 140). Why this appeal was never heard in the Provincial Court is explained by the spectacular events which soon followed. At the November, 1668, Provincial Court, Peake, the well known innkeeper of New Town on Bretton's Bay, who was a former justice of St. Mary's County and an extensive landowner, was tried for having killed William Price with a sword on October 23, 1668, at Peake's inn. Although it was shown that Peake was drunk at the time of the murder, he was found guilty and sentenced to be hanged. After sentence of death was passed, his request that he might suffer death before his own house where he committed the murder was granted. The murder, the trial, and spectacular execution, have been fully discussed by the editor in a previous volume of the Archives (LVII, xxvii-xxviii). There was no evidence recorded which would tend to show whether the suit just referred to played any part in the murder of the attorney by his client. The unsavory record of William Price, the victim, a former indentured servant who had become a landowner and practicing attorney before the Charles County Court, is also discussed (ibid. p. xxviii).

CLERGYMEN AND CHURCHES

A few notes on the clergymen and churches mentioned in this record may be of interest. Since the establishment of Charles County in 1658 down through the year 1674, when this record closes, three Protestant ministers are known to have officiated in that county. These were Francis Doughtie, John Legatt, and Matthew Hill. Doughtie and Hill are known to have been ordained clergymen of the Church of England who had been evicted for non-conformity from English parishes. Legatt, of whom less is known, was also doubtless of the Church of England. Before the Protestant Revolution of 1689, there were no Church of England parishes established by law in Maryland, nor did the Roman Catholic lord proprietaries have anything to do with the appointment of the Anglican clergy, at this time few in number, who came into the Province. It will be seen in the case of the Rev. Matthew Hill, that he was "elected and chosen by the Protestant Inhabitants" of the locality in which he served (p. 262).

Francis Doughtie had a variegated ministerial career in which, following his eviction in England, he officiated in Congregational churches in Massachusetts, in Dutch Reformed churches in New York, and in a Church of England parish on the Eastern Shore of Virginia; he was also in Rhode Island. After four years in Virginia in Hungars Parish, Accomack, he came to Charles County in 1658, remaining here until early in 1662, when he returned to Virginia to take a parish on the western shore. There he became rector of Rappahannock Parish across the Potomac, where his Puritan leanings, personal weaknesses, and witch-hunting proclivities, got him into difficulties. His wife continued to live in Maryland, and he died in Virginia about 1684 (Wm. & Mary Coll. Quart. 1939, 301-2). While in Maryland he had acquired on January 17, 1659/60, the lease on a 200 acre plantation in "the Parish of or hamlet of Pickewaxon in Charles County" from Giles Tompkinson, on which he and his wife Anne, after they had returned to Virginia, assigned their lease, February 9, 1662/3, to Walter Beane, one of the Justices of Charles County (Arch. Md. LIII; 396). Just about the time he finally left Virginia, Doughtie, by deed of gift dated July 16, 1669, conveyed cattle which he owned in Maryland to his Oneal grandchildren, the children of his daughter Mary, who had married as her second husband the Indian fighter, Captain Hugh Oneal (p. 206). These cattle were doubtless on the Oneal plantation. A sketch of Doughtie's colorful career by Louis Dow Scisco has appeared in the Maryland Historical Magazine (XXXIII, 1928, 155-162); and further notes on him will be found in the introduction to an earlier volume of the Archives (LIII, xxvi, xxxiv, lii-iv).

John Legett (Legatt) followed Doughtie as minister in Charles County. Nothing has been learned of his English antecedents, nor do the Maryland records indicate whether he had leanings towards non-conformity or Puritanism, as had Doughtie and Hill. The first mention of him by name was on November 18, 1662, when he appears as a witness to a Charles County letter of attorney (Arch. Md. LIII; 270), but it is quite possible, however, that Legett was in Charles County earlier in this year. At the March, 1661/2 court, Edmund Lindsay sued for, and recovered from, a certain William Hills one hundred and fifty pounds of tobacco which Hills had promised some time before to pay to Lindsay as churchwarden for the minister (unnamed) and for the building of a church (ibid. 192). This was doubtless the new minister, Legett, as it is unlikely that the retiring parson, Doughtie, would have been interested in the new venture of building a church. The location of this church will be referred to later. On March 17, 1662/3, Legett purchased from Thomas Carvill a plantation of four hundred acres, called "Smootly", on the west side of Wicomico River (ibid. 345). At about the same date, at the March, 1662/3, court, he was charged by the Portuguese Jew, Jacob (John) Lumbrozo of unsavory record, with having married certain servants without license, but was found not guilty by the court (Arch. Md. XLIX; 84-85). A suit in Chancery, heard in May 1675, shows that Legett died March 7, 1663/4, without issue, and that because of a defect in the title his plantation was escheat to the Proprietary. The court ordered that one third of it be reserved for the use of his widow Bridgett for life (Arch. Md. LI, 147-8, 480-483). In 1674 she was sued by her husband's clerical successor, the Rev. Matthew Hill, for refusing to return certain cattle to him (pp. 505-506). A suit heard at the March, 1669/70, court, to be referred to more fully later, indicates that Bridgett Legett when she married the Reverend John Leggett was the widow of William Hungerford of Charles County, who had died some time previous to October, 1662; and that she had a Hungerford son, a "youth" of the same name as his father, who was being taught to "write & Cast Accts" by Nehemiah Blakiston (pp. xlii, 247).

There was an interval between 1665 and 1669, the latter being the date when Hill came to Charles County, when there was apparently no Protestant minister in this county. At the November, 1665, court, when a woman living with Giles Tompkinson was charged with bastardy, Tompkinson declared in court that he was the father of the child with which she was then pregnant, and "that his marriage was as good as possibly it Could bee maed by the Protestants hee beeing one becaus that befor that time and euer since thear hath not bin a protestant Minister in the Prouince and that to Matrimony is only nessessary the parties Consent and Publication thearof befor a Lawfull Churchman and for their Consents it is Apparent and for the worlds Satisfaction thay hear publish them selues Man and wife till death them doe part" (Arch. Md. LIII; 599). As no action by the court is recorded, the marriage was doubtless recognized as valid under the common law.

The Rev. Matthew Hill appears four years later, to have followed John Legett as the minister in Charles County. There are not many references to Hill in the Maryland records. He is said to have come to Charles County in 1669. It must have been very soon after his arrival that he married Edith Beane, the daughter of Walter Beane, one of the justices of Charles County, who, in his will dated April 20, 1670, names his daughter Edith as then the wife of Matthew Hill. On July 2, 1670, William Marshall of Piquasquo, Charles County, a former justice of that county and a prominent planter, recorded an interesting deed of gift of cattle. This recites that, on account of his good will and the pious affection he bears to the people of Charles County and particularly to the Protestant minister and inhabitants of Charles County, he gives "all the cattle [ear-marked in a designated way] . . . Commonly called th^e Church Cattle . . . in th^e p^rsnt Custody of Francis Pope & Bridget Legatt to th^e number of thirty . . . for the use of the Minister for th^e time being elected & chosen by th^e Protestant inhabitants." A fat steer was given to Minister Hill personally. The remaining cattle were given in trust to three overseers, "M^r Mathew Hill M^r Humph. Warren of Hattons Point & M^r John Bowles att Pickywaxen" . . . "for the use & benefits of th^e poor or indigent Inhabitants", living between the Wicomico and the Potomac rivers "from John Coates now dwelling plantation on Wicocomoco side & from Thomas Bakers now dwelling plantation on Potomack side downe wards th^e neck as farr as th^e point Commonly called Cobe-point [Cob Point]." Numerous restrictions and conditions were imposed upon the trustees (pp. 262-264).

Little has been learned about Matthew Hill's activities while minister of Charles County, but from what follows it appears that he had his difficulties during the ten years he was here. Perhaps it was leanings towards Puritanism that got him in difficulties with his congregation. It appears from what follows that Hill had an interesting, if stormy, clerical career in England before crossing the Atlantic. As no reference to his English career is to be found in any Maryland published record, it is worth noting here that the following sketch of his life appeared in Edmund Calamy's Nonconformist's Memorial, the second edition of which was published in London in 1803 (Vol. III, pp. 471-472). From this, and from John Venn's Alumni Cantabrigienses; London, 1922-1927, (Part 1, Vol. II, p. 372), we learn that Matthew Hill, the son of Matthew Hill of York, attended school in York and was admitted in 1649 at the age of sixteen to Magdalene College, Cambridge, where he received his B.A. degree in 1652-1653, and his M.A. in 1656. He was "solemnly ordained" and became a preacher at Healough, Yorkshire, and later at Thirsk, Yorkshire, during the Commonwealth. He was ejected from Thirsk in 1662 after the restoration of Charles II, on account of his non-conformity. His struggles for a livelihood after his ejection are recited in some detail; but he is said to have refused to conform as offensive to his conscience. For a while he had a chaplainship at Gatten near London. Apparently on account of bad health, he went to the West Indies, carrying nothing with him but a "few cloaths, a Bible a Concordance, and a small parcell of MSS." "He fixed at Charles County, Maryland, in 1669, where a brighter scene began to open, and he had a prospect of considerable usefulness in the ministry, and of a good advantage by his labours in temporal respects. But new troubles afterwards arose, which greatly disappointed his hopes." What these troubles were, we are not told; nor anything further about his life in America, nor the date of his death. He is described by Calamy as a man of ready abilities, a good scholar, a serious, warm, and lively preacher, and of a free and generous spirit.

On May 1, 1672, Hill patented a tract of 400 acres of land in Portobacco Hundred, Charles County, under the name Poppleton", named by him for a parish and hamlet on the outskirts of his native city, York. (Patent Record Liber No. 16, folio 598; Land Office, Annapolis). The last references as yet found to Matthew Hill in Charles County were in the years 1673 and 1674. At the August, 1673, court, Hill sued Bridgett Legett, the widow of John Legett his predecessor as the minister of Charles County, for harboring a cow and calf belonging to him. These the court ordered her to return to Hill (pp. 505-506). She had doubtless had the cattle at the 400 acre plantation which her husband, John Legett, had purchased on March 17, 1662/3, on the north side of Wicomico River, adjoining the lands of John Hatch and John Courts (Arch. Md. LIII; 343-345). A month later, in September, 1673, Hill, now described as "clerk", was reported sick (p. 508). His last appearance in these records was in a suit heard at the January, 1673-4, court, for a wedding fee. The evidence showed that he had waited five years before suing Robert Cady for 100 pounds of tobacco for marrying him in 1669 to his wife Elizabeth, but the court awarded him his fee and the costs of suit. He died in 1679. His wife, Edith Beane, may not have survived him for, on October 7, 1679, Henry Bonner requested the Probate Court to appoint Eleanor Beane, the mother of Hill's wife Edith, the administratrix of his estate.

The name of Henry Warren (alias Pelham), the Jesuit priest, whose activities have been referred to in a previous volume of the Archives (LVII, liv-lv), appears twice in this record. After the death of a certain George Manwaring of Charles County, his plantation overseer, Alexander Sennet, petitioned the court to order the administrators, Henry Adams and Thomas Mathews, both prominent Catholics and both justices, to pay him 1570 pounds of tobacco which the books and accounts of the deceased showed were due him. This was ordered at the August, 1672, court, after a certificate by "Mr. Henry Warren", dated March 9, 1672, was presented, declaring that "Mr. George Manwaring on his death bead" had acknowledged this indebtedness to Sennet (p. 399). In a case involving a runaway servant boy heard at the September, 1674, court, a witness refers to "Mr Henry Warrens Overseer" (p. 582).

The single mention of a church in this court record is to be found in the evidence of a certain Matthew Saunders, a witness in a suit involving an exchange of cattle, heard at the September, 1674, court, who deposed that, as he and "Francis Goodricke, on a Sunday came from Church they called at William Boydens at Mr. Rozers Indian Fields" (p. 585). Rozer was an extensive landowner but a tract named "Indian Fields", owned by him, cannot be identified or located. It is believed that this was the church built about 1662 when the Rev. John Legett was the Charles County minister, and as the Charter of Maryland forbade the erection of any but Anglican churches, Catholics and dissenters worshipped in private chapels or houses. This church where Legett officiated was located on a tract, patented July 22, 1662, by Edmund Lindsay, the innkeeper and planter, which he sold February 10, 1662/3, reserving the one acre "which formerly hee had given the Church . . . which the Church now standeth on" (Arch. Md. LIII, liv, 327-328). This land is located on the north side of the Potomac River on the easternmost branch of Nangemy (Avon) Creek, in Portobacco Hundred, probably not far distant from the town of Portobacco (Charles County, Rent Roll, MSS, Md. Hist. Soc.). In 1684 a port of entry was described as "at the head of Portobacco Creek near the church there" (Arch. Md. XIII; 112). If there was an earlier church in Charles County than that built for John Legett, it cannot be located.

PHYSICIANS, CHIRURGEONS, AND APOTHECARIES

Physicians, chirurgeons, and medical matters, are frequently mentioned in these court proceedings. For apparently the first time in a Maryland record we find mention here of an apothecary. It is most unlikely that any of the physicians or chirurgeons mentioned had training other than perhaps apprenticeship under some other practitioner. Their occupation is usually revealed in suits for "attendance and physick" against slow paying patients, or when their names appear in land conveyances to which they were parties. In some cases paupers, who had become charges of the counties, were consigned by the court to the care of a man whose pay might, or might not, be conditional on a "cure." Suits for "physick" were also filed by persons who did not pretend to be practitioners; in one instance by one of the leading county justices. The apothecary referred to above is also called physician.

Edward Maddocks (Maddox), who was between twenty-three and twenty-six years old when he is first referred to in this record, appears frequently and variously as a "Phisiḱon", "Chirurgion", and "Apothecary." The justices at the November, 1669, court, agreed to pay Maddocks 800 pounds of tobacco out of the county levy for the care for six months of Lucy Good, suffering from a "Lame Legg", with the proviso that "if he Cure th^e s^d Lucy of her Lameness he is also allowed one years service from th^e s^d Lucy", who was doubtless a broken down indentured servant whose master had thrown her upon public charity (pp. 230, 248). A little later Maddocks got judgment for the sum of 240 pounds for having attended Samuel Price whom he at various times had bled, cupped, purged and given a "Cordiall Bolus" (p. 260). He also sued Edmund Lindsay, the innkeeper, and was awarded 980 pounds for attendance and physicks administered to his wife and children; pills, "playsters", "cordiall julep", "Cordiall Electuary", and a "purging apozem for yo^r Wife", were listed as having been supplied (p. 246). As the grantor of land in 1672 he appears as "Physiçon"; in 1674 as grantee of a tract on the Anacostine River as "Apothecary", and again later in 1672 as apothecary (pp. 407, 532, 597). At this period the Potomac above the entrance of Saint Isidore's Creek (now known as the Anacostia River) was called the Anacostin River (Maryland Historical Magazine, 1933, pp. 134-5).

John Lemaire (De Le Maire) appears in 1673 as chirurgion in a deed in which he conveys land on Portobacco Creek (pp. 454, 456). He was a native of Anjou, France, and was naturalized in 1674 (Arch. Md. II; 400-402). In 1674 the court gave him the custody and care of William Sparke, "a lame man"; if he make a perfect cure he was to receive 2000 pounds of tobacco out of the public levy, and if Sparke remained sound one whole year longer another 1000 pounds; but if the patient died within a half year only 1000 pounds was to be paid him (p. 563). Charles Gregory, in a petition to the March, 1673, court, describes himself as "Chirurgion." The court had placed in his care "a poore distressed lame Man . . . being ulcerated of both his leggs the wch your Petiçoner tooke in cure and used his intençons and industry to cure both by external & internall medecines." As the man was now "almost cured", Gregory requested the court to award the allowance of 1000 pounds of tobacco provided for in the levy, and promised that he would continue the cure for another year. The court granted the petition (p. 546). Robert Perce, "Chyrurgion", at the January, 1669/70, court, sues and recovers from George Thompson, a former clerk of the court, a debt of 3200 pounds of tobacco, but whether for professional services or not, is not stated (p. 232).

Nicholas Solbey appears in active practice in Charles County until his death, which took place late in 1673. He is referred to in the testamentary records as "chirurgion." We know of him through several suits entered by him before his death against slow paying patients, and also through those filed by his administrator, John Allen the sheriff, after his death. One of these was against Henry Bonner, the recently deposed court clerk, from whom he recovered 724 pounds of tobacco for bleeding, attendance, and visits, and for supplying "oyntment" for his leg and "plaisters" and purging powders, as well as medicaments for members of his family (pp. 334-335). From David Steward he received 660 pounds of tobacco for attendance and physick; to whom, in addition to "bleeding" and purging, he had administered "Epis pasticks to neck & wrists", a "Bottle of Aperitive Julep", a "purging Glister", "Spirit of vitrioll oyle of Anisseeds methridate deascordiu" (pp. 367-368). After Solbey's death his administrator, John Allen, had writs issued against nineteen persons, named in the record, presumably for debts due Solbey for professional services, as the three which came up for trial before this record ends were all for "parcells of physick" (pp. 573, 603-604).

A certain Miles Chaffe, the master of John Meredith, sued the administrator of the estate of Francis Bullock to collect the large sum of 2999 pounds of tobacco "for severall potions of physick & attendance administered to Bullock by Meredith, servant" of Chaffe (pp. 325-326). Chaffe also sued Robert Rowlands for physick administered to the latter's family by his servant Meredith. The cases were nonsuited because a quietus est, previously granted the administrator, rendered the estate immune to suit (p. 326). Had more than 2999 pounds of tobacco been claimed by Chafe, action could not have been brought in a county court, the Provincial Court having jurisdiction where the sum involved was 3000 pounds of tobacco and upwards. There were three other litigants who sued to collect payment for varying amounts of physick, without indication as to whether or not medical attention was also involved. One of these was entered by no less a person than James Lindsay, one of the justices (p. 110). The administrator of the estate of Samuel Burford successfully sued Henry Moore, who was a carpenter, for 1280 pounds of tobacco for physick administered by Burford to Moore (p. 264). As the result of a petition to the Upper House of Assembly by Alexander Howell, a former servant of Mrs. Elizabeth Weeks, who had been disabled "by a distemper of the numbe Paulsy and shaking of his Joynts, and a lameness in his backe and knees and leggs", the Charles County commissioners were ordered by the Assembly to provide for him (Arch. Md. II; 14). The county court record shows that Thomas Gibson agreed to provide for Howell with "sufficient meate, drinke, and Cloaths washing and Lodging at 1400 lbs. [of tobacco] per annum" (pp. 20-21). The Charles County court finally relieved itself of the care of Gibson, when at the March, 1667/8, session, it agreed to pay Absolem Covent, a Bristol merchant, 1000 pounds of tobacco to transport him to England (p. 123). The suit of John Barker against Nicholas Grosse for accommodation "in the tyme of the Def^{ts} Sickness" perhaps was only a boarding bill (p. 547).

VITAL RECORDS

Charles County was one of the few Maryland counties which lived up to the provisions of the act of the Assembly requiring that records of births, marriages, and deaths, be filed with the county clerk and recorded. Or perhaps it would be better to say one of the few counties in which vital records have been preserved, perhaps because they were entered in the body of the court proceedings, and not kept in separate libers which have since been lost. It will be seen from the dates of the court sessions at which the vital records were entered, that the events recorded had often long preceded the date of their entry in the record book. The births of a number of children in one family were not infrequently entered at the same time. For the nine year period there were recorded 60 births, 7 marriages, and 16 deaths. This is obviously a very incomplete record over a nine year period for a community having an average population of about 1800 persons. It is evident that the majority of births, marriages, and deaths were not recorded at all. Perhaps the Anglican ministers in Charles County and the Jesuits at Portobacco kept registers which have been lost.

INDENTURED SERVANTS

Difficulties between indentured servants and their masters occupied more of the attention of the county courts than did any other civil cases except actions for debt. One of the frequent causes of trouble was the attempt of masters to extend the period of service beyond the provisions of the indenture; or, if there was no written contract, beyond the "customary" seven year time; or on account of extra time claimed when the servant had a record of absence from having "run away." Disputes were perhaps most frequent when servants had passed by assignment from one master to another. Freedom was also sought on grounds of cruelty. There were numerous suits of masters of runaway servants against other householders for harboring runaways without notifying their masters. In the case of a girl with a runaway record, juries were not prone to allow the "runaway time" to be added to her term of service, if she had been severely whipped each time she had run away. The usual, or "customary", period of indentured service was seven years unless the indenture specifically provided a different term, or servitude had begun in childhood, when it was ordinarily extended until majority. The relations between masters and servants, as brought out by the court records of this period, have already been quite fully discussed in an earlier volume of the Archives (LIII, xxxi-xxxiv).

It was customary at court sessions, under the act of 1661, to have the ages of recently acquired servants who were under age determined in open court and made a matter of record. During the nine year period covered by this record 181 servants in all had their ages thus adjudged by the Charles County Court. The purpose of this was to prevent future disputes as to when the term of service had expired and a servant had become free. There are some instances of this recorded for the nine year period covered by this record. Whether the relatively fewer whippings ordered by the court during this period, as compared with the record of the preceding nine years, was due to a more humanitarian attitude on the part of the court, or is more apparent than real and due to the failure of the changing and incompetent court clerks to enter such orders in the record, is difficult to decide. That the coroner in one year held three inquests over the bodies of dead servants is not without significance as to the hardships to which they were exposed.

A few examples of suits by servants against masters are illustrative. Japhet Griphyn, a servant, sued his master, John Hatch, a well known planter, for his freedom and for the "customary" allowance of corn and clothing, declaring that his time (seven years) had expired. Hatch said that "he bought th^e Plaintife . . . for ten yeares but acknowledged he hath noe Indenture to testifie th^e sale." The purchase had been made on November 23, 1659, soon after the ship he came in had arrived. The case was heard before a jury. Evidence was presented that Griphyn had run away and had been "brought back by hue and crye." Griphyn declared "he went away" because his time had expired, and that he had not "run away." The jury found that Hatch had "noe prooffe th^t th^e Plaintife was Servant for 10 years; therefore in our Conscience he is free having served as much time as can in equitie be required"; and further found that he ought to have his corn and clothes without the advantage to his master "by absence [as a runaway] of service in the seaven years legallie proved" (pp. 46-47). In an action for freedom by a servant, David Ralston, against his master, Daniel Johnson, at the September, 1667, court, Ralston demanded £10 sterling as well as "one good Cloth Suit of Kersey a Shift of White Linnen, one new paire of Stockins and Shoes, two hoes and an Axe" as the consideration provided in his indenture, dated July 27, 1663, calling for a four year term of service. The master claimed additional time because, he said, there was due to him two months and seven days time when Ralston had been a runaway from a former master. The jury gave him his freedom, not only because he had, since his indenture had expired, already served more time than the additional runaway time claimed, but also because Johnson had not entered suit in time to entitle him to the benefit of the act of Assembly under which he sued. The jury, however, found that Johnson could elect either to give corn and clothes, or £10 sterling, as he pleased, but that both could not be claimed by Ralston. Costs were assessed by the court against the master. Johnson then entered an appeal to the Provincial Court, but the county court ordered that Ralston be free unless Johnson prosecuted his appeal (pp. 108-110). The Provincial Court proceedings do not show that Johnson ever prosecuted an appeal.

The court, all the members of which doubtless had indentured servants on their plantations or in their households, seems to have felt that certain attorneys were responsible for unwarranted suits for freedom brought against masters. At the March, 1673, court, it was ordered that "Whereas sevall Attorneyes have undertaken to mañage Serv^{ts} Causes ags^t their Maisters & M^{rs} to th^e M^{rs} & M^{ss} greate charge & damage It is ordered that no pson Act as Attorney for any Serv^t hereafter, But such as the Court shall appointe" (p. 496). Whether this was really a lawyers' racket as the justices felt, or whether as holders of indentured servants they feared that their rights were being undermined, is left to the reader to decide. As will be seen, certain planters seem to have been dealers in servants. In two instances servants were given by their masters in exchange for land (pp. 147, 169). A number of servants with foreign names, especially Dutch, appear on the record.

There are a number of suits for damages by masters against other householders for having harbored runaway servants, brought under the provisions of the act of 1671. Under this law the harborer not only was obliged to pay damages to the master, but also a fine to the Lord Proprietary and a reward to the informer. One suspects that stories, often only too true, of masters' cruelty to servants influenced humane "entertainers" in harboring the runaways. Captain Hugh Oneal at the March, 1672/3, court, recovered from John Morris and Hugh French 400 pounds of tobacco damages and 1020 pounds for costs of suit, for entertaining for several weeks and refusing to return to her master, Rachell Cooke, Oneal's maid servant. No testimony is recorded, but 400 pounds damages and costs were awarded to the owner (p. 495). One wonders whether this was a bachelor's establishment and Rachell a comely lass. John Courts, at the August, 1674, court, entered suit against John Hartwell for himself and on "behalf of the Lord Proprietary". It was shown that Hartwell had entertained a runaway man servant at his Portobacco plantation for four days. He was fined 1500 pounds of tobacco, 500 pounds a day for three of the days, one-half to go to the master and one-half to the Lord Proprietary (pp. 581-582). At the June, 1673, court, Alexander Smith sued a servant's former owner, no less a person than John Allen, the then sheriff of Charles County, who had sold him a servant with five years' time to serve, whom the court had set free before he had served four years. Allen's agreement "to make good" a service of five years was filed in court; the court awarded Smith 1500 pounds of tobacco for the seventeen months' service which he had paid for, but which had not been rendered. In the agreement for purchase, dated February 28, 1669/70, Allen, the defendant, was therein described as "Jn^o Allen of London Merch" (p. 504). This shows that the sheriff was a very recent arrival in the Province. Several releases from service are recorded. Thus, at the August, 1674, court, Kelham Magloughlin in open court freed George Spicer from any further service due him (p. 573). Some of these releases were doubtless expressions of good will on the part of masters to deserving servants; or in some cases servants may have been released who were not worth their keep.

An especially shady transaction is revealed in the suit of Thomas Damer, a servant, against his master John Cage, at the March, 1673, court. Cage had purchased Damer through Humphrey Warren, acting as the factor for an English merchant. Warren, a prominent planter, was, as will be shown later, also a dealer in indentured servants, and had been a former member of the court. Damer had, on August 1, 1668, indentured himself in England for four years to Thomas Tolson, a London merchant. It was shown that Warren, Tolson's factor in Maryland, had erased Damer's name in the indenture and substituted for his name that of another servant sold at the same time, leaving Damer without any written record of his four year indenture, and therefore liable, as a servant without an indenture contract, to serve the "customary" seven year term. A jury granted Damer his freedom, but the record does not disclose whether Warren was held responsible for the fraud (p. 492). At the June, 1673, court, Edward Typton, a servant of Warren's, doubtless urged on by Damer's success in gaining his freedom, petitioned the court, asserting that he had already served his full term, and asked that he be given his freedom. No details are given, but the court decided that his time had not yet expired (p. 502). A case which had come up a few years before, at the April, 1669, court, in which both Cage and Warren were also involved, shows Warren as an importer, or factor, for the sale of servants. Cage in this suit against Warren declared that he had provided board and lodging for eight of Warren's servants, obviously upon their arrival, for several weeks in the winter and spring of 1669, and that Warren had refused to pay him. Cage asked the court to order the payment to him of such an amount "as to them seem meet." For reasons not given in the record, possibly because there was no written contract, the court refused and nonsuited Cage (pp. 189-190).

Two cases were heard involving great cruelty to servants. At the January, 1669-70, court, Nicholas Emanson [Emerson], the innkeeper, brought suit to compel his servant, Elizabeth Hasell, who had run away several times, and, it was said, had not received "any correction", to serve, as provided for in the act of 1671, the additional time during which she had been absent. Elizabeth asked for a jury trial. Six witnesses swore that they had seen her severely beaten by her mistress. One deposed that "she beat her & putt her in irons"; another that she "tyed her to her bed post & whipped her"; another that her mistress said that she had beat her for stealing a clout, and "that there was a puddle of blood in the room & great wounds in her back"; another witness that he had seen her whipped and put in irons. The jury found for Elizabeth, and the court gave judgment for freedom and costs of 420 pounds of tobacco to be paid by Emanson (pp. 234-235). The legal point seems to have been that had she been whipped for running away, the time in which she was absent would not have been added to her original term of service, but if she had been whipped for other offences, runaway time might have been added. In another case involving cruelty to a maid servant, Jonathan Marler, the master, sued a neighbor, Thomas Hays. Marler declared that Hays, at the plaintiff's plantation "with one how [hoe] helve did Strike and beat a Serv^t of him the said Jonathan named Eliz^a Thompson . . . down to the Ground wth his foote and Shoe did kick her Soe th^t he lamed her and Caused her legg wth the Bruise to Swell and afterwards break out into a Soare." Marler asked damages of 500 pounds of tobacco and payment to a "Chyrurgeon for the Cure of the said legg" as Elizabeth had become incapable of service. The court, doubtless because the chirurgion, John Lemaire, testified that Elizabeth had told him "that th^e sore bread of it Selfe", ordered a nonsuit with costs to the plaintiff (pp. 432-433).

At the June, 1669, court, two servants, unnamed, were presented to the court as having run away, and were ordered, respectively, twelve and ten lashes. One of these was presented by Nicholas Emanson, the innkeeper, who figured in the case of cruelty towards a servant, as just narrated; the other was presented by John Caen. No details are given; they were doubtless both runaways (p. 196). They were perhaps brought before the court for sentence, so that, if ordered by the court to be whipped as runaways, their lost time might later be added to their specified indenture time of service.

Instances are recorded where very young children were bound out until they became of age. At the June, 1673, court, Peter Macknemillion (Mackmillion), the young son of George Macknemillion who had married Grace Carr (p. 221), was bound out to Peter Carr, his "godfather," until he came of age, and provision was made for the care of the father's estate (p. 497). It is of interest that Peter Carr, who died in 1683, left a legacy to Peter. In two instances land was exchanged for a servant. John Lambert, a planter, on March 10, 1667/8, deeded to another planter, John Godshall, one hundred acres called "Hog Quarter" on the east side of Nangemy Creek, the consideration being a servant named Thomas Porch, for which consideration Lambert "doth Acknowledge himselfe Satisfied Contented" (pp. 147-148). Thomas Stone and his brother, John Stone on August 8, 1668, conveyed to Thomas King 500 acres on Nangemy Creek, the consideration being two servants and 7000 pounds of tobacco (p. 169).

LAND

Deeds for land in the several counties might be recorded, according to the choice of the purchaser, either in the Provincial Court at St. Mary's, or in the court of the county in which the land was located. Nonresidents usually made use of the Provincial Court, while residents of a county nearly always had their deeds enrolled in that county. A very large proportion of all deeds and other land records were recorded in the counties.

There were, during the 1666-1674 period, 177 conveyances of land recorded in the Charles County Court. In bulk these conveyances comprise nearly half, 303 pages, of this volume of 617 pages. The General Assembly at the March-April, 1674, session, passed an act requiring that all conveyances of land to be valid be recorded as explained in the preceding paragraph (Arch. Md. II; 305-308). A somewhat similar act, passed in 1663, does not seem to have been sufficiently stringent to have effected the purpose for which it was intended (ibid. I; 487-488). In the early years following the settlement, the usual method of conveyance was by assignment on the back of the original patent, which then passed from hand to hand. This method of conveyance was, of course, impossible after the land originally patented was divided up and portions sold to different purchasers. Conveyance by "indenture" or deed, had, as a matter of fact, become the usual method of transfer before the act of 1671 was passed. We find, however, in the case of a few tracts recorded in this volume, that such assignments are noted as being on the back of the patent. It was, of course, also to the interest of the Lord Proprietary that he should have a record of all land conveyances, so as to insure the payment to him of his alienation fee, which was equivalent in amount to a year's quit rent. Thus, at the August, 1666, court, five recent purchasers of land appeared before the court and "acknowledgeth a years Rent dew [to the Lord Proprietary] for an allienation" upon the land purchased (p. 30).

In form most of the deeds are lengthy, with the repetitious verbiage of that day, averaging nearly one thousand words, or about two printed pages of this volume. The longer the deed, the higher was the clerk's fee for recording, and doubtless the larger the fee paid to the attorney or conveyancer for drawing it up. Some thirty-five, or nearly one in every six, of the deeds conclude with the phrase that the deed to the purchaser was delivered "with livery and seizin by turfe and twigge"; in one instance "by the delivery of twelve pence" (p. 302); and in several instances "by seizin" alone. But in general, the feudal custom of delivery of possession by livery of seizin with "turf and twig" became relatively less frequent towards the end of our period, and acknowledgement of the conveyance in open court was the usual attestation of its validity. Attempts to ascribe the old feudal terminology "with turf and twig" to any particular lawyers in Charles County have not been successful.

There was a steady increase annually in the number of land transfers, those recorded in 1674 being almost double the number in the years 1666 or 1667. This increase went hand in hand with the opening up of lands further up the Potomac, on Nangemy (or Avon) Creek, and in the Portobacco and the Zachia neighborhoods. Land prices would also appear to have been rising. Several of the larger transactions involved payments of as much as 12,000 to 20,000 pounds of tobacco for plantations of 250 to 300 acres or even less (pp. 37, 85, 97, 384, 425, 454). One plantation of 162 acres at Portobacco brought 30,000 pounds. There were a few land transactions as far up the Potomac as the present District of Columbia line (pp. 3, 110, 424, 486, 533). The main or west branch of the Potomac was at this date called the Anacostin River and the deeds thus designated it. What is now the Anacostia River was then known as Saint Isidore's Creek (Md. Hist. Mag., xxxiii, 1938, pp. 134-5).

Twelve leases, some of considerable interest, are recorded. Three, feudal in terms and phrase, are for manor lands (pp. 29, 51-52, 265). On February 23, 1668/9, Edmund Lindsay, planter, innkeeper, and gentleman, as he was variously called, assigned to Benjamin Rozer a lease of 1,000 acres of manor land lying in Charles County, which Cecilius Calvert, the second Lord Proprietary, had first leased in January, 1663/4, for twenty-one years to "Isaac Allerton Gent and Dame Elizabeth his Wife relict and Admin^{trix} of Simon Overzee late of St John in the County of St Maries", in consideration of Dame Elizabeth relinquishing certain of her dower rights in other Overzee lands. The annual rent, payable semi-annually at the Annunciation of the Virgin and at the feast of St. Michael the Archangel, was to be one pound sterling or its equivalent, in addition to Allerton's planting orchards of a specified number of apple and pear trees, and building and keeping in repair certain houses, barns, and stables (pp. 265-6). Allerton, now described as of Northumberland County, Virginia, three years later on March 18, 1666/7, assigned his lease to Edmund Lindsay on condition that the latter carry out all the terms of the lease (pp. 266-7). And, on February 3, 1668/9, Lindsay, for the consideration of 10,000 pounds of tobacco, reassigned the lease for the remaining years of its life to Benjamin Rozer (p. 267). On August 8, 1674, Thomas Allanton, gentleman, leased to Gerard Browne, planter, both of Charles County, 100 acres of his Christian Temple Manor lying on the south side of Mattawoman or St. Thomas Creek. The duration of the lease was "forever", and the terms a yearly rent of "the sume of foure shillings sterling or the value thereof in vendable Commodities of the Countey & on year of Indian corn" (p. 571-2). John Lewger of Charles County, gentleman, the former Provincial Secretary, and his wife Martha, on August 13, 1666, leased "forever" to John Wright of Maryland, gentleman, for the consideration of £50 sterling owing and due by Wright to Lewger, a tract of 150 acres, being a certain part of Lewger's manor of 1000 acres on St. Elizabeth's Branch upon which Wright now dwells; the amount of the rent to be one Roasting Pige and too Capons", payable upon the fourth day of December at "the mannor hows of the said Mannor" (pp. 28-30).

Walter Beane, a justice, and his wife Elizabeth, on June 9, 1666, leased "forever" to James Walker, both of Charles County, a tract (unnamed) of 200 acres on the south side of Wicomico River, with houses, orchards, etc., upon it. The land is described as formerly owned by Walker and as having been sold by him to Christopher Carnell, deceased, and since owned by several others until it was conveyed by Mr. Francis Doughtie "laet Minister to this County" to Walter Beane, the now lessor; the annual rent to be four shillings of good current English money, or its equivalent in goods or commodities (pp. 14-16). Another lease, of an acre of land and the spring upon it, was recorded September 3, 1673, by John Jarbo, gentleman, of St. Mary's County, to Thomas Baker of Charles County. This spring was on an acre of land which Jarbo had reserved when he sold 299 acres of a 300 acre tract of which the one acre was a part, to John Nevill, who subsequently sold his 299 acres to Baker, who now lives upon it near the said spring. No consideration is mentioned in the deed, but the annual rent was to be "one Eare of Sund Indian Corne" (pp.

499-500). This is the same tract for which the Charles County Court at its June, 1658, session, had ordered Nevill to give a new deed to Baker, as the original deed was "righttin with powder inke" which had faded, and could "not now bee red" (Arch. Md. LIII; 5-6).

NEHEMIAH BLAKISTON

The name of Nehemiah Blakiston (d. 1693), a younger son of John Blakiston of Newcastle, one of the regicide judges at the trial of Charles I, and a man later very prominent in Maryland affairs, occurs in the record in a curious way. At the March, 1674, court, Bridgett Legett, the widow of John Legett, the former Charles County minister, sued Thomas Lomax for 2000 pounds of tobacco, which she declared was due her for accommodations, meat, and drink which she had furnished to Nehemiah Blakiston for twenty months in the years 1669 and 1670. Young Blakiston seems to have come to Maryland early in 1668 with his uncle George Blakiston, sheriff of Durham, England, who settled in St. Mary's County. Nehemiah was probably, at the time of his arrival, in his early twenties. He later became colonel; Chief Justice of the Provincial Court, Chancellor, a member of the Council, and collector of customs for Potomac and Wicomico Rivers. Bridgett Legett's suit against Thomas Lomax came up at the March 1673/4, court. She declared that Lomax had failed to keep his promise to pay her for Blakiston's board what he had agreed. After it was shown that the latter had himself already paid her 800 pounds of tobacco, judgment was given against Lomax for the remaining 1200 pounds (pp. 547-8). Blakiston may not yet have fully gotten on his feet in Maryland when this suit came up and may have been befriended by Lomax. The connection between them, if any, is not known. They both lived in St. Mary's County, A sketch of the Blakiston family will be found in the Maryland Historical Magazine (II, 56-58).

Another suit in which both Nehemiah Blakiston and Mrs. John Legett appear, came before the March, 1669/70, court. William Smoot, a large land-owner, who owned land which the Rev. John Legett had purchased, sued a certain Thomas Thorowgood, to whom he said he had given a boat, a cow, and a heifer, to teach a youth, William Hungerford, the son of Mrs. Legett, how "to write & Cast Accts.", and that Thorowgood had gone away and failed to do so. The latter denied that he had made such a bargain, either with Smoot or with Mrs. Legett, the youth's mother, and declared that while he was away Mr. Blakiston had taught him; the court granted a nonsuit (p. 247; Arch. Md. LIII, 251, 599). This indicates that Mrs. Bridgett Legett was the widow of William Hungerford, Sr., when she married John Legett, and that she had a son William Hungerford, Jr.

JACOB LUMBROZO

In the introduction to a previous volume of the Archives (LIII, 1-li), there has been sketched the unsavory record of the Portuguese Jew, Jacob (John) Lumbrozo of Charles County, who appears variously as physician, attorney, innkeeper, storekeeper, and planter, and in the criminal records as charged with blasphemy, abortion, attempted rape, and with being a receiver of stolen goods. At the November, 1665, session he was presented to the court by Thomas Alcocks, planter and carpenter, charged with having received the goods stolen from Alcocks' house when the latter's wife and children were murdered by Indians and his household goods carried away by them. Lumbrozo was turned over by the Charles County Court to the sheriff for trial at the next Provincial Court. The case did not come up before the Provincial Court, however, and the explanation of why it did not, is disclosed by an entry in this volume. At the August, 1667, Charles County Court, a suit was filed by Thomas Alcocks against John Robinson, administrator of the estate of John Lumbrozo, who was then dead. The evidence shows that on November 16, 1665, the same day that his case had been ordered sent up to the Provincial Court, Lumbrozo and Alcocks referred their disputes to arbitration, and that they "chose us William Calvert and Zachary Wade gent. to determine all business between them." Each litigant bonded himself for 10,000 pounds of tobacco "to stand to our award", concerning the differences between them, viz.: "for the s^d Lumbrozo's having in his custody severall of the s^d Alcocks goods taken out of his house" when his wife and child were murdered. Calvert and Wade awarded Alcocks 900 pounds of tobacco, and the court ordered Lumbrozo's administrator to make payment of this amount (pp. 92-93). At the same court two other suits for small debts against Lumbrozo's estate were heard and decided (pp. 93-94). The record also shows that Lumbrozo had a son born after the father's death and after his widow's remarriage: "John Lumbrozo Sonne of John Lumbrozo dec^d was Born in th^e monthe of June Anno Dni 1666" (p. 130). It may be recalled that at the July, 1663, court, Lumbrozo and his maid servant Elizabeth Wilde had been presented for having brought on an abortion upon her, she charging him with responsibility for her pregnancy, and that he saved himself by marrying her, thus disqualifying her from appearing as a witness against him (Arch. Md. LIII, 1-li). Lumbrozo died late in 1665, or early in 1666. His widow Elizabeth lost no time in marrying a second husband, John Browne, a well-to-do Charles County planter, as she, under the name Elizabeth Browne, took out letters of administration upon Lumbrozo's estate May 25, 1666, the month before her son by Lumbrozo was born. A suit for debt heard at the November 27, 1666, court, shows that she was then again a widow (p. 48). Letters of administration upon John Browne's estate were granted to his brother Gerard Browne, January 19, 1666/7.

COUNTY TAX LEVIES

The annual county tax levies were fixed by the court, usually at a special session held towards the close of the year. The total county expenses for the year were then determined, and this figure divided by the number of taxables fixed the amount of the tax in pounds of tobacco imposed upon each taxable. These lists of county expenses show, among other items, the expenses of transmitting the county burgesses to and from St. Mary's City, the salary of the sheriff for collecting the levies, grand jury expenses, payments to the coroner for holding inquests upon those dead by misadventure, room rent in houses or inns where court was held, bridge construction, board and care in private homes of the poor, the sick, and the infirm, and the care of orphan infants, bounties for wolves' heads, the custody of the standards of weights and measures, powder and shot for public defense, moving the stocks and pillory, the cost of building the court house and prison, and various other items. The levies for the years 1666, 1669, 1671, 1672, and 1674, are to be found recorded (pp. 40, 229, 347-348, 431, 586-587); the failure to enter the levies for 1667, 1668, and 1673, was doubtless due to unsettled conditions in the clerk's office during these years. The figures for the number of taxables for the five years entered are: 1666—548; 1669—668; 1671—736; 1672—722; 1674—783. A rough estimate of the total population of Charles County in 1665, based on the increases in the number of taxables, is 1500; the population in 1674 appears to have increased to about 2100. It may be added that there were as yet very few negroes in the Province. There is only one mention of a negro slave in this nine year record (p. 134).

Some of the more important items to be found in the levies may be summarized. The levy for 1671 shows that Edmund Lindsay (Lendsey), the Portobacco innkeeper and planter, was paid 1000 pounds of tobacco "for the trouble of his house for keeping the court" (pp. 347-348); and the following year Benjamin Rozer, the sheriff, received 450 pounds "while court was kept at his house" (p. 431). Where the court was held in other years is not disclosed. After 1674 the court sessions were doubtless held in the new court house. In the year 1671, Ignatius Causine, the coroner, received 750 pounds of tobacco as his fee for holding "three inquests upon the death of Servants" (pp. 347-348). The 1672 levy shows that 10,000 pounds of tobacco was provided to build a court house (p. 341), but this was not then carried out as a later record tells us that a court house was provided for under a different appropriation. The 1674 levy provided 20,000 pounds of tobacco "for a Ct. House & Prison" (pp. 586-587). The levy for 1669 shows that William Boarman received 3000 pounds of tobacco for making a bridge, and the 1674 levy discloses another payment to him for a bridge, this time 7500 pounds of tobacco (pp. 229, 586, 587). All the levies show payments of bounties for wolves' heads. Down to the year 1671, this bounty was 100 pounds of tobacco for each head, but in October, 1671, the General Assembly increased the bounty to 200 pounds. The number of bounties paid varied year by year from a minimum of ten to a maximum of twenty-seven.

Under the act of 1671, Henry Adams had been appointed Keeper of the Standards of Weights and Measures for Charles County, and 1600 pounds of tobacco had been allowed him for their purchase (Arch. Md. II; 279-281); the levy for 1671 shows the payment to him of this amount (p. 347), and the levy for 1672 of 400 pounds additional to complete the purchase (p. 431). It may be noted that, as in more recent times, the assessment upon each taxable for the nine year period covered by this record, shows a rapid year by year increase. In 1666, it was 21 pounds of tobacco for each taxable; in 1674, it had reached 105 pounds for each, the large increase in the latter year being in great part due to the cost of the new court house and the bridge.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

There are only a few references to Indians or to Indian warfare in this record. One of these appears to be an instance of disgraceful treatment of a friendly Indian. A Nangemy Indian, Misapacka, complained of maltreatment by a planter at the September, 1666, Charles County Court, and "John Tomkinson in the absence of M^r Thomas Mathews [the then sheriff], was sworne to make a trew interpretation of Misapacka a nangemy Indians Complaint." Misapacka declared that he had bought corn at Pamunkey and had hired an Indian as guide, and had given him ten arms length of Roanoke to bring corn and beans in a canoe to his house in Nangemy. The Indian was hailed when he was passing Mr. Pinnar's house "and thereupon According to the Articles hee Came ashore and they thearupon immediately seased him and bound him and Carried him unto M^r Waed (Wade) hows but when hee Returned thear was missing about one hogset of Corne a bushell of Beanes one boule and too mats." Richard Pinnar came to the next court to answer the complaint, but the court clerk made no entry as to the outcome (p. 34). Again at the November, 1674, court, Cornelius Cormacke was ordered to appear at the next court to answer the complaint of the Indians, but our record ends with this session so we do not know the nature of the complaint or the action upon it, if any (p. 615).

The court at the January, 1666/7, session, ordered that Ralph Wormelie (Wormeley) and Garret Synnet (Sennet) who had "receaved hurt, and damage in th^e March to Piscataway in this present yeare 1666 by Casuall Shott", draw a bill of their charges for injuries to be sent to the Provincial Court to be entered on the "publique levie" (Provincial levy) (p. 55; Arch. Md. LVII, xlv). Zachary Wade, one of the justices, recorded at the March, 1665/6, court, that he had deposited with George Thompson, clerk of the court, 990 pounds "of the Countrys tobacco" for powder and shot, doubtless in connection with the march to Piscataway (p. 11). It was possibly to this same Indian disturbance that Mary Wheeler referred, when as a witness at the March, 1669/70, court, she dated a past occurrence as having taken place in "th^e yeare my husband went th^e march" (p. 254). This was unquestionably the march to Piscataway against the Indians. In various land conveyances we find mentioned as landmarks "Indian fields" or "old Indian fields", and in one instance an "old Indian fort." Indian fields are noted as being located on Mattawoman or St. Thomas' Creek (pp. 155, 156, 225), and as on Chingamuxon Creek in Piscataway River (p. 599). "Old Indian fields" are noted on Wicomico River and Portobacco Creek (pp. 268, 523, 552). The location of Benjamin Rozer's Indian Fields plantation has not been identified (p. 585). The "olde Indian forte" (p. 533), known as the Anacostin Fort, is described as located on St. Isidore's Creek, later called Anacostia River where the village of Twining in the District of Columbia now stands (Md. Hist. Mag. 1938, pp. 134-148). "Paths", which may be Indian trails, are discussed in another section (p. xlviii).

In the county levy for 1666, there is a curious mention of "Indian heads", the meaning of which is ambiguous. The entry in question shows 277 pounds of tobacco due "To Nich. Emerson p^r acco^t of Charges for Indian heads & the stocks and pillorie fetching" (p. 40). As far as is known there were no bounties offered for Indian scalps at this time, nor if there had been, would the bounty have been such a trivial sum. It seems almost certain, however, that by "Indian heads" were meant the heads of wolves killed by Indians, which had been acquired from them by the white settlers, who were entitled to the wolf head bounty offered, then 100 pounds of tobacco. Emerson doubtlessly received 200 pounds for two wolves heads and 77 pounds for fetching the stocks and pillory for a meeting of the court.

ARCHITECTURE AND BUILDING

Of interest to students of Colonial architecture and building will be the details of seventeenth century construction and costs to be found in the specifications for building the new county court house and prison erected in 1674-1675, and also for building details in suits for debts due for carpentering work done in building an addition to a dwelling house, for remodelling, and for new farm buildings. At the January, 1667/8, court, Thomas Alcocks, a carpenter, filed two suits against George Thompson, the former clerk of the court. This is the same Thomas Alcocks (Alcoke, Allcock) whose wife and children had been killed by the Indians in 1665 (Arch. Md. LIII, li, 609). One suit was for 2400 pounds of tobacco for a 20 × 10 foot addition to Thompson's dwelling, a "fourtie foot house"; the other for 1930 pounds for what seem to have been alterations in the dwelling itself. In addition to the 4330 pounds of tobacco for work sued for in the two suits, there were also asked damages of 4500 pounds. The work done as recited in the first suit is itemized in great detail. The specifications were in Thompson's own hand. The house was to be "double raftred Studded and grouncel^d" and "ceeled up to the Wall plate"; there were to be an inside chimney (400 pounds of tobacco), five-foot closets, and four tables. In the second suit there was a charge of 250 pounds of tobacco for two windows and five doors; 250 pounds "for making a paire of welsh Staires and taking down of a welsh Chimney to the Wall plate, and building it with a Roof up." There was also a new kitchen 60 feet long by 20 feet wide with a Welsh chimney and a lobs corner, at a cost of 800 pounds. Another charge of 630 pounds was for making a pair of racks for guns, "wind-beaming" the 40 foot house, and for "new covering his Dwelling house 40 foot long." Before the cases were heard in court, Alcocks entered an appeal in both cases to the Provincial Court (pp. 113-14). As there is no record of its having been heard there, the matter was doubtless settled out of court before coming to trial. Diligent enquiry has failed to throw any light upon what was meant by "a paire of welsh Staires", a "Welsh chimney", and a "Lobs corner". An even earlier mention of a Welsh chimney is to be found in the Maryland records. Under date of October 19, 1654, Thomas Wilford agrees, in a maintenance contract, to have built for the use of Paul Sympon, a house 15 x 15 feet with a "welsh Chimney" (Arch. Md. X, p. 302).

At the November, 1671, court, George Godfrey sued the estate of Daniel Johnson, who had just died, for building work he had recently finished for Johnson. This included building a 60 foot tobacco house at a cost of 1200 pounds of tobacco, building a 10 foot hen house for 200 pounds, and "getting the frame of a 40 foot tobacco house", making a total of 1500 pounds of tobacco. He asked in addition damages of 2400 pounds. The court awarded a total of 1500 pounds to Godfrey (pp. 353-354). In the suit of Hugh Thomas against Nicholas Grosse, a demand was made for the payment of 500 pounds of tobacco for the building of a "house fifteen foot Long & ten foot wide & . . . one bed steed & formes." The court gave judgment against Grosse together with costs of 240 pounds (pp. 354-355). There were also suits for debts due in connection with the building of a cider mill (p. 232), and a tobacco house (p. 44).

Reference has already been made to the new court house and prison built in 1674-1675 by John Allen for Charles County, at a cost, with one acre of land, of 20,000 pounds of tobacco. The specifications and details of construction are given with meticulous accuracy. In general it may be said that the court house was to be 25 feet in length by 22 feet in breadth with an upper floor and two brick chimneys. The floors were to be well planked, the lower rooms to be wainscoted, the upper rooms well daubed and sealed with mortar, white limed and sized; there were to be convenient doors, locks, keys, bolts, latches, hinges, staircases, stairs, windows, window frames, casements, and glazing. The prison, 25 X 15 feet, was to be of sufficient strength for a prison, with a loft or garret over it. The interested reader is referred for building details to the deed (pp. 615-618).

HIGHWAYS AND BRIDGES

Laws had been passed at the 1666, 1669, and 1671, sessions of the General Assembly providing for the laying out, making, and maintenance of highways, under which taxables of the neighborhoods benefited were obliged to furnish labor for this purpose, or were to be fined if they refused to do so when called upon (Arch. Md. II; 134-135, 219-220, 321-322); and at the 1674 Assembly an act was passed for making passable, as an added protection against Indians "who lived in great numbers" in Charles County, a road from Charles County to St. Mary's through Zachia Swamp, as the old highway had been flooded and made useless by the erection of a mill dam at the head of the Wicomico River. The road was to be erected within two miles of the mill, and to be completed by March 20, 1675 (ibid. 408-409). In pursuance of the requirements of the act of 1666, the commissioners of Charles County, on November 13, 1666, ordered the constables of the county to appoint overseers of highways who were to mark out convenient highways passable for horse and foot to the heads of rivers, creeks, and swamps, and to hire or force labor for this purpose. The overseers of the highways were also authorized to levy tobacco for labor equally among the taxpayers (ibid. 39-40).

In the 1669 county levy there is an item of 3000 pounds of tobacco to be paid Captain Boarman for building a bridge (p. 229). The location of the bridge is not given, but one suspects that it was over Zachia Swamp. At the January, 1673-4, court, four persons were "presented" by constables to the grand jury "for refusing to assist in the mending of the highways." When the matter came before the court, one Clement Thompson "beinge drunck & not able to anwser for himself" was fined 100 pounds of tobacco and ordered to answer at the next court. Another, John Longe, who declared "he was never required" was dismissed, and Robert Lofton, summoned to appear, was returned by the sheriff as not to be found. William Cotton, presented at the same time, was "returned to be dead by the Sheriff" (p. 519). At the August, 1674, court, in pursuance of the act of the Assembly of this same year, four of the justices, with full power to act for the entire bench, were appointed to agree with the commissioners of St. Mary's County in making a highway, passable for horse and foot, over Zachia Swamp within two miles of the mill, the money to be raised by a levy of tobacco (p. 564). There can be no question that the 7500 pounds of tobacco allowed in the 1674 levy to be paid to Captain William Boarman "for making the bridge" was for the Zachia Swamp highway (p. 587).

In two deeds we find paths mentioned as land bounds in a way to indicate that they were fixed landmarks, and very possibly Indian trails. One of these marked the bounds of the tract "Napping" on the west side of Portobacco, or St. Thomas' Creek (p. 178); the other refers to a "bounded oak standing by the path side", marking the bounds of Coome's Purchase on the west side of the Wicomico River (p. 419).

LIVESTOCK AND LIVESTOCK MARKS

Horses, cattle, and swine figure frequently in the court records. When these, bearing the owner's recorded mark, were sold, the new purchasers often required that the change of ownership be recorded in a bill of sale. Thus, when Philip Gibbon sold a "black stone horse with a star on the forehead" and with a recorded mark, there was a bill of sale recorded (p. 531). The same was done when William Fairecloth, a planter, sold to Edmund Lindsay, the planter and innkeeper, a marked red cow and a heifer (p. 566). At the June, 1673, court, John Grubb sued Richard Ambrose for 400 pounds of tobacco which had been agreed upon between them as the price for Grubb's gelding a horse, which Ambrose had not paid. Grubb asked the court for 400 pounds and in addition 600 pounds damages. The court awarded Grubb 400 pounds, and 300 pounds costs (pp. 501-502). Misbranding stock owned by others was punishable by damages to the owner and a fine to the Lord Proprietary, half of the latter going to the informer. Edmund Lindsay, at the August, 1674, court, sued Thomas Allanson for misbranding and "detaining" a mare which had strayed away, and demanded 3000 pounds of tobacco as damages. The defendant claimed that the branding was done in error, but a jury found for the plaintiff, and the court allowed the plaintiff the 3000 pounds asked, as well as 749 pounds for the costs of suit (pp. 582-583). The claim that the misbranding was done by mistake may have saved Allanson from a fine to the Proprietary. At the June, 1674, court, George Godfrey sued Alexander Sennet for 2000 pounds of tobacco for taking up and marking a mare of his running at large in the woods, and marking it with Sennet's own marks. He also asked 3000 pounds damages. Godfrey lost his suit when the jury found that he had sold the mare to Nicholas Solbey, the chirurgeon, and that Solbey had sold it to Sennet. Costs of 720 pounds were also awarded to Sennet (p. 563).

Livestock marks were registered with the clerk of the county court and recorded in the court proceedings. For horses branding was usually employed; for cattle earmarks and occasionally branding; for swine earmarks alone. Three imaginative owners selected the same earmark, "a flower of Deluce", obviously a fleur de lis (p. 91, 142, 526). They may have lived in different sections of the county, and confusion of their stock running at large was therefore unlikely. Most of the marks are merely described, but in a number of instances a rough outline sketch, reproduced in this volume, is entered in the court record together with the description. Sheep are not mentioned during this period, wolves being still sufficiently numerous to render their raising unprofitable. During this nine year period, over 150 livestock marks are found recorded, or an average of over seventeen a year. The records were very badly kept, however; for example there were no entries of livestock marks at all in the year 1670, so that the above figures are an understatement. Had the entries been accurately kept the annual increase in the number of livestock producers in the county would have been a rough measure of the population increase. The names of new settlers and of indentured servants who had recently become free, are to be found among the new registrants.

INNKEEPERS AND LIQUORS

Wines, liquors, and other drinks are of frequent mention in these records. Under acts of the Assembly maximum prices that might be charged by innkeepers for various drinks were specified. There were also a number of suits filed by innkeepers against patrons who had not paid their bills for drinks, food, and lodging. The most conspicuous case is that of the Clerk of the Court, Richard Boughton, who was sued by Edmund Lindsey for not paying for the drinks consumed at his wedding (pp. 212-214). At the March, 1673-4, court, John Wood sued Edmund Taylor for 850 pounds of tobacco for "24 Gallons of quince drinke 400^{lb-tob} . . . [and] 21 Gallons of quince drinke in September 420^{lb-tob}" (p. 548). At the same court John Wood was sued by Alexander Sennet for 444 pounds of tobacco for 37 gallons of "sider." It was shown that Wood had received only 25 gallons, and the court then ordered Sennet to pay for this at the rate of 12 pounds of tobacco per gallon (p. 540). At the January, 1674/5, court, John Allen, gentleman, who was presented by the grand jury "for sellenge liquors at unreasonable rates, pleaded he never sold any, which not being proved the presentment was dasht" (p. 519). He had evidently not yet opened the "public ordinary", near the new court house he was building, which he had given bond to do (pp. 617-618). At the same court two others were presented for the same cause but "were never called" (p. 519). Fayal wine was the cause of a suit. Phillip Lynes sued Samuell Cooke for not having delivered as agreed between them: a pipe of Fayal wine for 2500 pounds and a hogshead for 1250 pounds. A jury found 400 pounds damages for Lynes with 880 pounds costs (pp. 500-501). There were quite a number of suits for debt filed by two Portobacco innkeepers which, in most cases, specified that they were for accommodations, food, or drinks, many against men of prominence. For such debts Nicholas Emanson (Emerson) (d. 1671) sued John Lewger, former Provincial Secretary, Justice James Lindsay, and Richard Boughton, clerk of the court (pp. 117, 121, 128, 214, 220). Edmund Lindsay for the same reason sued Richard Fowke, Thomas Boughton, John Nevill, Jacob Leah, John Thompsonkinson, Edward Maddock, Thomas Abbott, and Philip Lynes (pp. 236, 239-240, 243, 327, 547).

WOMEN'S CLOTHING

Two expensive items of women's clothing come to light in these records. Mrs. Verlinda Stone, the widow of Governor William Stone, is disclosed in a suit at the August, 1670, court, to have paid Mrs. Elizabeth Story, the administratrix of Walter Story, 350 pounds of tobacco for a gown—a high price in Maryland for those early days (p. 261). At the September, 1671, court, another suit reveals that Henry Bonner, the late clerk of the court, who married Walter Story's widow Elizabeth, bought in 1669 from Francis Bullock a "petticoat", which must have been a handsome one, for 300 pounds of tobacco. The petticoat was then delivered to Bullock's maid, Winifrett, who, in exchange for it, was to make for Bonner six half shirts, six whole shirts, six cravats, six neckcloths, and six handkerchiefs. This Winifrett failed to do, nor did Bullock in his lifetime return the petticoat, so Bonner asked damages of 1000 pounds of tobacco from Bullock's administrator. But the court ruled that the claim was barred by a quietus est which had been issued upon the Bullock estate (p. 345).

MUSIC

Two references to music appear in this record, both cases referring to the cittern, a now obsolete musical instrument. At the March, 1670/1, court, the administrator of the estate of John Hitchison was sued by Miles Chafe, who declared that Hitchison had agreed in 1668 to pay 800 pounds of tobacco to Chafe to teach him to play the "Gitthren"; and that Chafe had carried out his part of the bargain, but Hitchison died soon afterwards, and the administrator refused to make payment. He asks for the 800 pounds of tobacco and 500 pounds additional for damages. A postponement was granted until the next court, but as the case did not come up again, it was doubtless "composed" out of court (p. 328). At the November, 1672, court, John Harvey deposed that five years before, in May, 1667, he had left with John Mould a "Citterne to be glewed & mended"; this he valued at 250 pounds of tobacco. He declared that Mould had refused either to return the cittern or to satisfy him for it. There was conflicting testimony by witnesses, but the court ordered Mould to pay Harvey 100 pounds of tobacco and cost of suit (pp. 437-438).

FUNERAL CUSTOMS

There is only one reference to funeral customs to be found in these records. At the June, 1674, court, George Godfrey, a carpenter, who appears, as were most carpenters, to have been an undertaker as well, entered suit for 250 pounds of tobacco against Richard Beck at whose instance he "did make and deliver two Sevall Coffins for the desent buriall of the Father and Mother of him the sd Richd at Sevall tymes." He also sued Beck for two pairs of gloves valued at 60 pounds of tobacco, and a pair of shoes valued at 25 pounds, apparently worn at the funeral. The carpenter won his suit (p. 562).

The Plaintife arresting th^e Def^t in an acon of debt to th^e value of 840^{lb} of tobaccoe preferreth his Declaracon (viz^t)

To the Worp^{le} th^e Co^mission^{rs} of Charles Countie.

The Plaintife declares ag^t th^e Defend^t for that th^e Defend^t stands indebted to th^e Plaintife in the sume of eight hundred and fourtie weight of tobaccoe p acco^t under hand signed and doth deny payment of the same whereupon th^e Plaintife bringeth his suite humble Craveing order of this Court for his said debt wth Costs &c And &c.

The Defend^t Confesseth th^e debt but pleadeth th^t th^e Plaintife refused his tobaccoe w^{ch} he tendered to him in satisfacon thereof and alleadgeth th^t the same tobaccoe was afterwards received by another as good and Merchantable tobaccoe

The Court finds for th^e Plaintife, but give judgment that th^e tobaccoe tendered to him by the Defend^t ought to have been received by the Plaintife being merchantable toba^c for that it was afterwards received as such by another.

Nicholas Grosse Plf Walt : Beane Def^t

The Plf su^moning th^e Defend^t in his a^con of Detinue to th^e value of 412th of toba^c preferreth his following Declara^con (viz^t) To th^e Wor^{ple} the Co^mission^{rs} of Charles Countie.

Nicholas Grosse of th^e same Countie Planter complaineth ag^t Walt. Beane of th^e same Countie gent^r for that Whereas th^e s^d Walter Beane by his Rec^r Jonathan Marler did receive of the said Nicholas Grosse the su^me of 412th of tobaccoe over and above his just debt of thirteene hundred & fiftie pounds of tobaccoe as by the receipt under hand of th^e said Jonathan Marler dated the sixth of November 1665 doth appeare and th^e said Beane hath disposed of th^e said su^me of 412th of toba^c to his owne proper use and benefit yet notwithstanding th^e s^d Beane doth unjustlie detain and refuse to pay or in anie wise satisfie the said Groce for th^e said su^me of foure hundred [p. 93] and twelve pounds of tobaccoe contrarie to all Lawe and Justice, whereby the said Groce is damnified to th^e value of eight hundred pounds of toba^c And thereupon he brings his suite

Whereupon in Confirma^con of th^e said Declara^con th^e Plaintife humble requesteth That his evidences may be sworne w^{ch} was graunted

Richard Morrice aged about 30 yeares and sworne in open C^{rt} saith That M^r Beane came to his house one Morning, Nicholas Groce being there at th^e same time and they both falling into discourse about th^e said debt Nicholas Groce asked M^r Beane if he would pay it, to w^{ch} M^r Beane replied if I owe you anie thing I will pay it but said I owe you none; In fine saith M^r Beane unto th^e said Groce What will you abate, to w^{ch} th^e said Groce answered he would quitt th^e 12th of toba^c Will you take 300th saith M^r Beane, No saith Nicholas Groce; Then saith M^r Beane thou shalt not get a pound, and this Depon^t further saith not

Jonathan Marler aged about 26 yeares and sworne in open C^{rt} saith That he this Depon^t was requested of M^r Walter Beane the su^me of thirteene hundred and fiftie pounds of toba^c whereupon 3 hogsheads not paying the debt th^e s^d Depon^t received 4 hogsheads w^{ch} paid th^e same wth overplus of 412th of toba^c and this Depon^t gave his receipt for th^e said 4 hogsheads and this Depon^t further saith: That 2 of th^e said 4 hogsheads were paid unto M^r Beanes Carpenter for building a toba^c house; and th^e other two were paid unto this Depon^t in parte of satisfac^con for 6 hogsheads w^{ch} this Depon^t

further saith not.

Hereupon th^e Cr^t could not proceed to Judgem^t for that M^r Beane [p. 94] being a partie concerned there were not Comission^{rs} enough present to Constitute a full Courte and therefore the Busines was respited till th^e next Courte;

The Plaintife Declares ag^t th^e Defend^t in an action of th^e Case for that th^e Plaintife having demanded his freedome is denyed the same together wth his Corne, and Cloathes

The Premises Considered th^e Plaintife humblie Craveth ord^r of C^{rt} from th^e Wor^{ple} Co^mission^{rs} in Charles Countie together wth Costs and charge of suite And &c.

[p. 96] The Plaintife therefore in Confirma^con of his said Declara^con humblie requesteth that his evidences may be sworne w^{ch} was graunted

Robert Henley sworne in open C^{rt} saith That he was at M^r Hatch his house where M^r Warren and M^r Whittington kept store, and was Chafering wth him for a Serv^t w^{ch} he bought of him, and th^t he had promised another to M^r Hatch w^{ch} afterwards he coming to me told me If I would I might have him I asked him how Long he had to serve and he replied seaven yeares and this Deponent further saith not.

Hereupon th^e Defend^t prayeth that James Johnson might be sworne in his behalfe w^{ch} was graunted

James Johnson sworne in open C^{rt} saith That M^r David Warren, and M^r Whittington kept store at M^r Hatches house, and M^r Hatch did aske of M^r Warren whether he or me should have th^e Boy Whereupon M^r Francis Whittington said unto David Warren th^t M^r Hatch had th^e best tobaccoe of anie one thereabout Whereupon M^r Warren said That M^r Hatch should have him sooner then anie one besides; Soe M^r Hatch demanded how long he had to serve, and th^e said M^r Warren told him as long as he pleased for th^t matter for I brought him saith he from his freinds, and they desired me to put him of for as Long time as I pleased either for 12, 14, or 20 yeares; whereupon M^r Hatch replied That he would have him but for 10 yeares, and soe M^r Warren told him he should have him, and agreed wth the s^d M^r Hatch for th^e price and this Depon^t further saith not.

[p. 97] The Defend^t Subpaen^{as} Marmaduke Lindsey and Cuthbert Musgrave in open C^{rt}

Marmaduke Lindsey sworne in open C^{rt} saith That th^e Plaintife was brought home by hue and crye, and th^e Defend^t discoursing to him concerning his time not being out said unto th^e Plaintife how nowe M^r Runaway to w^{ch} th^e Plaintife replied That he did not run away but went away: Neither did you steale Mr Thoroughgoods Liber C Kanooe said th^e Defend^t to th^e Plaintife; Noe answered th^e Plaintife

 I tooke her away: But stay saith th^e Defend^t Ile knowe who hath harboured you all this while; That is noe matter replied th^e Plaintife, you went away before your time said th^e Defend^t to w^{ch} th^e Plaintife answered th^t for th^e time he went away before he would make satis-facon, and this Depon^t further saith not.

The Def^t saith th^t th^e Plaintife came to him th^e Defend^t and was sould unto him the 23th of November 1659 and th^t th^e shippe came

Cuthbert Musgrave aged 22 yeares and sworne in open Courte

 Thoroughgoods Kanooe saith th^e Defend^t to th^e Plaintife Noe replied for th^e time I have to serve Ile make you satisfacon and this Depon^t

 thereupon Ordered that 10th of toba^c be allowed to each man of them Hereupon the Jurie goe forth and having agrreed of their verdict give it into th^e Courte as followeth (viz^t)

Wee of th^e Jurie find noe prooffe th^t th^e Plaintife was Servant as much time as can in equitie be required, and this wee give as our verdict he is free, and ought to have his Corne and Cloathes allwaies reserving such advantage to th^e Defend^t as he can recover of th^e Plaintife by absence of service in seaven yeares legallie proved

Ordered Therefore That th^e Plaintife be free, and th^t th^e Defend^t

To th^e Wor^{ple} th^e Co^mmission^{rs} of Charles Countie The humble

The Plaintifes arresting th^e Defend^t in their a^con of debt upon acco^t to th^e value of 400^{lb} of tobaccoe preferre their declara^con as followeth (viz^t)

To th^e Wor^{ple} th^e Co^mmission^{rs} of Charles Countie.

The Plaintifes declare ag^t th^e Defend^t in their a^con of debt upon acco^t to th^e value of 400^{lb} of toba^c for th^t th^e Defend^t received goods of Elizabeth Lumbrozo then, nowe Elizabeth Brown: one of th^e Plaintifes w^{ch} said goods amounted to th^e quantitie of toba^c they declare for as they can make appeare w^{ch} payment is by the Defend^t denied Whereupon they bring their suite humblie Craveing ord^r of this Courte for their debt And &c.

Whereupon th^e Defend^t demandeth th^e Plaintife to prove his debt just and then he will Confesse a Judgment, and entereth th^e same as his plea.

[p. 100] Whereupon the Plaintife produceth his evidence Leonard Greene in confirma^con of his s^d Declara^con and in overthrowe of th^e Defend^{ts} plea

Leonard Greene being sworne in open Court saith That th^e Defend^t had as much ruine and sugar at th^e Doctors house as came to between 3 or 400^{lb} of tobaccoe and that th^e Def^t received it himselfe about Julie An^o 1665 to th^e best of this Depon^{ts} remembrance; and this Depon^t further saith That he being accidentallie at D^r Lumbrozo^s house at th^e same time he was desired to enter th^e said debt in th^e D^{rs} Booke of acco^{ts} w^{ch} he did accordinglie And this Depon^t further saith not.

Whereupon the Courte demand the Plaintifes to produce their Booke of acco^t w^{ch} they say they are not able to doe for th^t it is lost, and they knowe not what is become of it; The C^{rt} therefore hereupon adjudge th^e debt not justlie proved by one single evidence

Whereupon th^e Plfs Crave an appeale to th^e Provinciall Courte; Liber C but the Court over-rules their appeale; M^{dum} Mr Will. Marshall assenteth not to th^e over-ruling of the appeale but is of opinion that there ought to be an appeale

The Courte therefore find for th^e Defend^t a nonsuite

Ordered therefore th^t th^e Plaintife be Nonsuited and pay unto th^e Defend^t his Charges and costs of suite

Whereupon th^e Defend^t preferreth his Bill of Charges as fol-

Whereupon the said Marie Complaineth ag^t Alexander and Elizabeth his Servant aforesaid For That that is to say That the said

Marie being formerlie a Servant of the said Alexander, and after her departure from his said Service the said Alexander pretending that th^e s^d Marie had stolne a Coife out of his house the said Alexander did Comand his said Servant Elizabeth Taylor to goe unto the said Marie then in th^e Service of Edward Philpot, and demand th^e same of her Whereupon the said Marie to cleare her selfe from such fowle aspersion was willing and at the instance and request of the said Elizabeth did permit her the said Elizabeth to make search among the said Maries linnen but th^e said Elizabeth not being therewith Satisfied though no such Coife could be found did by force and armes take, and Carrie away from th^e s^d Marie a holland apron to th^e value of fiftie pounds of tobaccoe and did likewise at th^e said Philpots plantacon beate wound and evilly intreate her soe th^t of her life she did despaire whereby she the said Marie is exceedinglie damnified not onlie for th^t the said Elizabeth hath thereby disabled her to performe such service for w^{ch} she had hired herselfe to the said Philpot but allsoe for that the said Marie having a verie sore legge the Cure thereof hath been verie much hindered by the said beating and assault afores^d And the said Marie Ellis likewise further declareth and Complaineth ag^t the said Alexander Smyth for that th^t is to say That th^e s^d Alexander was not onlie by his instigacon and Comand abetting to the said trespasse comitted by the said Elizabeth his servant against th^e person and goods of the said Marie as aforesaid but allsoe hath wrongfullie withheld and detained th^e said Apron soe forcible taken away as afores^d and doth yet detaine and withhold the same whereupon the said Marie saith That by the said assault and detainer she is Damnified and hath Damage to th^e value of 500^{lb} of tobaccoe And thereupon she brings her suite.

Wee find for the plaintife against th^e Defend^t Elizabeth Taylor for forcibly taking away an apron from th^e plaintife and afterwards beating her and against th^e Defend^t Alexander Smyth as accessorie to detaining th^e said apron because he did not send th^e Apron home after he knew th^e said Elizabeth had th^e same; The Dammages wee value at 50th of tobaccoe.

Liber C

The Plaintife, and th^e Defend^t made their appearance by themselves, and the Plaintifes Declaracon was read in Court as followeth viz^t.

To th^e Wor^{ple} Comission^{rs} of Charles^e Countie

The Plaintife Declares ag^t th^e Defend^t for th^t th^e Plaintife having a Chest of Severall goods at M^r Walter Beanes house and delivering the key thereof to th^e Defend^t to give the same to M^r William Marshall whom th^e Defend^t (having in his absence from this Countie entrusted him wth all his other goods) desired that he would send for the said Chest from M^r Beanes afores^d but th^e Defend^t subillie Contriving to defraud th^e Plaintife of th^e said Chest of goods never delivered th^e key thereof to th^e s^d M^r Marshall but demanded th^e Chest of M^r Beane pretending that th^e Plaintife was indebted to him to th^e value of the said Chest of goods and upon M^r Beanes Denyall of the said Chest he this Defend^t presumed [p. 245] without anie order from th^e Plaintife soe to doe, to open the said Chest and take out the goods therein and Carrie th^e same away and upon the Plaintifes Demand of th^e said goods from the Defend^t he hath been and still is Denied the same Whereupon he Craves order of C^{rt} for th^e said goods or the value of them w^{ch} could not amount to lesse then th^e Sum^e of about 5 or 600th of tobaccoe together wth such Damages as this wor^{ple} C^{rt} shall please to award for th^e said wrong and injurie And &c.

Hereupon it was prayed by the Plaintife th^t M^{ris} Beane Sub-paena^d to th^e Court on his behalfe might be Sworne w^{ch} was done accordinglie

M^{ris} Beane Sworne in open C^{rt} saith That John Walton left a Chest at m^r Beanes and th^t Samuell Dobson came for th^e Chest but th^t m^r Beane refused to Deliver th^e chest unlesse th^e said Jo. Walton came himselfe for th^e same; and this Deponent saith That She bid th^e said Dobson take out what was in th^e Chest if he would, and further saith That th^e s^d Dobson did take out nothing but an old combe-Case, an old paire of Mill^d Stockins, and a paire of shoes to th^e best of this Depon^{ts} knowledge

The Plaintife hereupon Craves Imparlance till th^e next Court, th^t he may bring further evidence of th^e truth of his Declaracon w^{ch} was graunted

in an acon of th^e Case.

The Plaintife and th^e Defend^t made their appearance in C^{rt} for themselves and thereupon th^e Plaintifes Declaracon was read as followeth viz^t.

Liber C To the Wor^{ple} the Commission^{rs} of Charles Countie.

The Plaintife Declares ag^t th^e Defend^t in an a^on of th^e Case for th^t the Defend^t is indebted unto the Plaintife for eight Barrells of Corne, w^{ch} th^e Plaintife having demanded of th^e Defend^t is Denied paym^t of th^e same and thereupon he brings his suite

Hereupon the Plaintife Subpaena^d Jo. Lambert Ellener Lambert his wife, John Mun, and John Boyden in open Court

Ellener Lambert Sworne in open Court Saith That Thomas Allanson Thomas Winder and William Bateman being about th^e Spring of the yeare at th^e house of John Lambert the said Winder and Bateman being both joynt mates did Conclude to give th^e s^d Allanson sixe Barrells of Corne that they owed him and to pay him at M^r Harrisons house and likewise two Barrells more for spoiling bedding and other goods

[p. 246] John Lambert Saith That he heard Thomas Allanson discoursing with William Bateman about sixe barrells of Corne and that Bateman told him he might goe to Luke Green and receive it

John Mun Sworne in open C^t saith That he heard William Bateman say That he owed M^r Allanson sixe Barrells of Corne sometime in th^e yeare 1666, and that he heard John Boyden promise M^r Allanson That he would take a Bill for the Corne which Bateman and Winder owed him

Ordered That there be an Impar lance of this Busines till next Court

David Ralston Plaintife	}	Col. Gerrard Fowke Attorney of Dan. Johnson Defend ^t p Attorney George Thompson in a plea of Debt

The Plaintife and Defend^t making their appearance, the Plaintife by his Attorney and th^e Defend^t by himselfe the Plaintifes Declaracon, was read in Court as followeth viz^t

The Plaintife Declares against th^e Defend^t in his Action of Debt for 10th Sterling and one good Cloath Suite of Kersey a Shift of White Linnen, one new paire of Stockins and Shoes two hoes and one Axe being for and in Consideration of 4 yeares Service as more at Large may appeare by the said Ralstons Indenture bearing date the 27th of July 1663

The Defend^t entereth as his plea That th^e Plaintife is not free by reason th^t Assignm^t being made of him from Henrie Robbertson to Daniell Johnson, and before such assignm^t he having ran away and absented himselfe from his Master Robinson, the Defend^t Conceaves th^t by virtue of such Assignment afores^d Daniel Johnson ought of right to have such benefit by his said Running away, as if no such Assignm^t had been would have acrued to his Master Liber C Robinson, and as by an Act of Assemblie is in such case provided,

Hereupon for Proove of the Plaintiffes absenting himselfe from his Master Robbertson, and how long the Defend^t produceth a note under th^e hand of th^e said Robbertson certifieing th^e same together wth what Damage he Sustained thereby as followeth viz^t

These may Certifie whom it may Concerne That David Ralston was ranne away from me two Monthes and Seaven dayes before I bound him over to Daniel Johnson, and further I will take my Corporall oath that I Lost my Croppe by him in Corne, and tobaccoe as Witnes my hand this 25th of October 1667. Henrie

The marke  of Robbertson

Allsoe th^e Defend^t for further proove of th^e said Ralston th^e
Plaintifes absenting himselfe from th^e said Robertson Subpaena^d
Edmund Lyndsey into th^e Court who Deposed as followeth

Edmund Lyndsey Sworne in open C^t saith That th^e Plaintife came to his house in August last was twelvemonth & there remained 3 weeks or thereabout, and this Deponent saith he hired him, but [p. 247] yet Suspected him to be a runaway after his hiring of him because upon his this Deponents questioning of him where he had lived, and whom he Served he replied first about Akamack, and afterwards at th^e Clifts, and this Deponent further saith That so soone as he understood th^t he had lived about th^e Clifts, he desired M^r Sprigge to give notice at Patuxen th^t There was such a man in such a habite describing him as well as he could, and that if anie person Claimed him he was at th^e Deponents house, and M^r Sprigge did give notice of th^e same accordinglie and found out his master Robertson who thereupon sent to this Deponents house, and Carried him th^e Plaintife home, and further he Saith not Hereupon the Plaintiffes Attorney and th^e Defend^t agree to put th^e Busines to a Jurie, and accordinglie there issued a writt of venire facias to th^e Sherrife to Sumon a jurie of twelve honest men to trie whether th^e said Ralston were free or no whose Names were as followeth viz^t Stephen Montague foreman, John Worland, Thomas Allanson Thomas Henshall, William Baker, Henrie Neale,

John Mun, Owen Jones, Thomas King John Hackister Bennet Marchagay, John Walton, who upon Serious Consideraçon had, of th^e Depositions aforesaid, and the Allegaçons on both sides retorne their verdict as followeth viz^t

The Jurie findeth for th^e Plaintife against th^e Defend^t, and that th^e Plaintife is free and hath Served his time according to his Indenture because th^e Defend^t did not Commence Suite against th^e Plaintife for th^e time he was absent, th^e Plaintife having Served since the Indenture was expired as long time as he had absented himselfe, And the Defend^t did not Comēce suite to have th^e Benefit

Liber C of th^e Act as it is our opinion he ought to have done, and we conceive that it is at th^e Defend^{ts} Election to give the Plaintife Corne, and Cloathes, or tenne pounds Sterling w^{ch} he pleaseth

The Defend^t hereupon Craves an Appeale to th^e Provinciall Court which is graunted

Ordered Therefore That th^e Plaintife be free unlesse th^e Def^t Prosecute th^e appeale and that th^e Defend^t satisfie and pay unto him either 10th Sterling or Corne, and Cloathes as in the act is provided w^{ch} he pleaseth wth Costs

Land & letter of Attorney being here recorded fo: [blank]

In a Certain difference depending between Jeremy Kanedagh pft & Francis Kilborne & Eliz^a his wife Adm^{rx} of the goods & Chattells of Daniel Johnson decd, upon a reference from th^e Last Court.

The pft preferred his declara^on to be read in Court to the Effect as followeth.

The pft Complaineth ag^t th^e Def^t for that whereas he the Said
pft Sometime in th^e moneth of July in the yeare 1670 did promise & Engage to Serve Daniel Johnson in what Employment he Should imploy him in from the time above menconed in July till the last day of october next following in Considera^on whereof the Said Dan: Johnson did assume on himselfe & to the Said Jeremy did faithfully promise that he would pay him th^e quantity of Seaven hundred pounds of tobaccoe Now the S^d Jeremyah having faithfully Served the Said Daⁿ: Johnson & his Adm^{rs} the full time above-

Liber E menconed notwithstanding the Said Johnson in his lifetime nor th^e S^d Francis & Elizabeth Since his death hath payd the above Said Summe of Seaven hundred pounds of tobaccoe to him th^e S^d p^t but doth altogether refuse to pay the Same to th^e great damage & injury of him th^e S^d P^t whereupon he Saith he is damnified & hath loss to the vallew of 1000^{lb} to^b & thereupon he bringeth his Suite.

And for the prooffe of this his Complaint he produced these Ensueing wittnesses.

Robert Philips aged 30 yeares or thereabouts Sworne in open Court Saith That Some time in the yeare 1670 he did heare Daniel Johnson owne that he had hired Jeremy Canedagh & was to give him from Some time of July till the last of october the Summe of Seaven hundred pounds of tobaccoe & that he the S^d Deponent being a Sharer in th^e Crop payd Daniel Johnson 200^{lb} of tobaccoe towards it.

Thomas Helgar aged 26 yeares or thereabouts Sworne Saith, That the Said Jeremy Canedagh was att the time aforementioned & did worke on Daniell Johnsons plantation in the Crop but on what agreem^t he knoweth not Whereupon the Court granted Judgement to the Said Jeremy Canedagh against th^e S^d Francis Kilborne & Eliz^a his wife for the Said Summe of 700^{lb} of tobaccoe wth Costs of Suite.

The parties above named Likewise appearing in another Suite Comenced by the Said Jeremy Canedagh against the Said Francis Kilborne & Eliz^a his wife Adm^{rx} of the goods & Chattells of Daniel Johnson decd

The p^t for th^e prosecution of his Suit Comenced p^resented this Ensueing petition

To the Worshipfull th^e Com^{rs} of Charles County.

The Humble peticon of Jeremy Canedagh Humbly Sheweth.

[fol. 50] That yo^r peticoner having Served Daniel Johnson the tearme of one yeare in the yeare of our lord 1667 in Considera^{co}n of which Service the Said Daniel was obliged to to pay or deliver to yo^r peticoner two Cowes with Cow Calves by their Side which Cowes the Said Daniel Dellivered according to his agreement but they hapning to bring bull Calves the Said Daniel did order them to be marked for his owne use obliging himselfe to delliver to yo^r pet^r two Cow Calves in lieu of them the Same yeare w^{ch} he not performing & th^e next yeare being Surprised by Sudden Death that he Could not doe th^e Same & Francis Kilborne & Elizabeth his wife utterly refusing to make yo^r pet^r any equivalent Satisfaction for the Same yo^r peticoner humbly Craves yo^r worshyps would be pleased to passe Judgement against th^e S^d Francis & Eliz^a his wife Adm^{rx} of the goods & Chattells of th^e S^d Dan: Johnson decd for two heyfers of the Same age, these would have been if at p^{nt} or the vallew thereof as yo^r worships Shall See fitt And yo^r pet^r as in duty bound Shall Ever pray.

And for the prooffe of this his declaracōn he produced this En- Liber E sueing Evidence.

Edmond Lendsey aged Sixty foure yeares or thereabouts Sworne Saith That Sometime in Aprill Anno Domini 1668 Dan: Johnson upon th^e Calving of Two Cowes by him dellivered to Jeremy Canedagh th^e S^d Jeremy told him th^t they had brought bull Calves w^{ch} Daniel Johnson ordered him th^e S^d Edmond to marke of his th^e Said Daniels marke & Cutt them & he would give Jeremy Canedagh two Cow Calves of the Same age in the roome of them & further Saith not.

whereupon the Court gave Judgem^t ag^t the Def^{ts} for two Cow Calves which were Calved Sometime in march or Aprill Last with Costs &c
